

DOCK STRIKERS
RETURNING UNDER COURT WRIT, BUT SOME ARE BALKY

Brooklyn Piers, Some in New York Still Idle—Hearing on 80-Day Taft Act Injunction to Be Next Tuesday.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—Striking longshoremen returned to work up and down the East Coast today in the wake of a court order, but their absence was conspicuous at several major points.

The Brooklyn docks were idle through the morning, police reported, and there were spots of inactivity elsewhere along New York City's waterfront.

Across the Hudson river in Jersey City, union officials called off pickets, but dock hands failed to answer the shape-up whistle.

Many longshoremen returned to work in Philadelphia.

In Baltimore 7500 longshoremen started going back to work and local officers of the union advised shippers a full force would be available by tonight.

10-Day Injunction.

Whether absenteeism elsewhere was due to the uneasy truce on the docks that followed issuance yesterday of a 10-day Taft-Hartley act injunction or merely delay in issuing back to work orders was not clear.

Officials of the striking International Longshoremen's Association, based out of the American Federation of Labor recently for failing to cleanse itself of crime, have indicated compliance with the injunction may not be complete until tonight or tomorrow.

Those shape-ups that took place this morning were without incident.

There were no mixed work gangs, however, for the rival unions control workers at different piers. The court order issued last night enjoining further strike activity for 10 days under the Taft-Hartley law left unsettled the basic jurisdictional dispute between the ILA and the new AFL organization.

New Stoppages Likely.

Even as President Eisenhower's first use of the Taft-Hartley act brought a temporary truce in the I.L.A.'s wage-contract dispute with employers, there were reports that new stoppages might result from the I.L.A.'s fight with the American Federation of Labor for control of waterfront labor.

I.L.A. officials said their members might refuse to work alongside longshoremen who have quit the I.L.A. to join the AFL. Large numbers of longshoremen have left the I.L.A. in bolts which split some locals.

On the basis of a report by a three-man fact-finding board which met in New York over the weekend, Eisenhower yesterday ordered the Justice Department to seek a Taft-Hartley injunction.

Assistant Attorney General Warren Burger flew immediately to New York with a petition ready for Federal Judge Edward Weinfeld.

The judge last night ordered a 10-day halt to the strike to prevent "immediate and irreparable injury" to the national welfare. Weinfeld set next Tuesday for a formal hearing, at which he is expected to extend his order to the full 80-day period, expiring Christmas eve, permitted under the Taft-Hartley law.

Weinfeld's order was served at once on Patrick J. Connolly, I.L.A. executive vice president. Connolly then directed the return to work by an estimated 50,000 to 60,000 I.L.A. dockers from Portland, Me., to Hampton Roads, Va.

The I.L.A.'s strike was a direct consequence of the failure of the union and the New York Shipping Association, representing 170 shipping and stevedoring companies, to reach agreement on a new contract.

The I.L.A. asking for wage boost—the I.L.A. asking for wage-welfare package of 13 cents an hour, the employers offering an 8½ cents package. The present basic rate is $2.27 an hour.

ILA leaders said last night they would not contest the Government's bid for a full 80-day injunction if employers agreed to make any contract signed during the period retroactive to Oct. 1.

New York shipping employers agreed to that condition.

BOY, 3, CLIMBS ABOARD TRAIN AND GOES FOR 238-MILE RIDE

BUTTE, Mont., Oct. 6 (AP)—Three-year-old Danny Quinlan won't start to school for several years, but he studied geography anyway yesterday.

He climbed aboard a Northern Pacific passenger train at Billings all by himself and enjoyed his 238-mile ride to Butte. Danny's presence on the train was not discovered until a young mother noticed she had one too many children. She told the conductor, who wired Butte police to meet the train.

Before he reached Butte, police had Danny pegged as the missing son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Quinlan, Billings.

Veiled Prophet to Crown Queen
Tonight; Diamond Jubilee Visit

10,000 Guests to See Coronation of 53d Monarch—Parade Tomorrow Evening.

Celebrating the Diamond Jubilee anniversary of his first visit to St. Louis in 1878, the Veiled Prophet of Khorassan will crown his fifty-third Queen of Love and Beauty at Kiel Auditorium tonight as the climax of a lavishly-staged ceremonial.

The occasion will be the seventh Veiled Prophet Ball, traditional formal event which opens the St. Louis social season. Coronation of the Queen and her four Special Maids of Honor will take place before more than 10,000 invited guests.

Tomorrow evening, in his final appearance for 1953, His Mystrious Majesty and the five young women of his choice, selected from among this season's debutantes, will ride at the head of the seventy-first parade through central and downtown St. Louis.

The Veiled Prophet's court meteorologist predicted generally fair and cool weather for the ball and the parade, with temperatures in the middle 40s at the time of both events. There was no threat of rain for formally-attired guests attending the ball and the large crowds expected to view the 20-float parade.

Just as last year, program for the ball will begin at 7:45 p.m. with a preliminary concert by the 60-piece orchestra under direction of Benjamin L. Rader.

Persons holding gallery tickets may enter at 6 o'clock and admission to lower levels will be at 7 o'clock.

At 8:35 o'clock 15 former Veiled Prophet Queens will be escorted to their special box as musicians play Kreisler's "Viennese Melody." Then, after the National Anthem concludes the

GENERAL SAYS
INDIA WON'T
TRY TO BAR MASS
BREAK OF P.O.W.'S

To Do So Would Cause 'Terrible Slaughter,' Officer Asserts—Renewed Threats by South Korea.

PANMUNJOM, Oct. 6 (AP)—The senior Indian officer in Korea said today that Indian troops would not attempt to halt a mass outbreak of anti-Communist war prisoners because of the "terrible slaughter" that would follow.

Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya made the statement at a press conference as thousands jammed streets in the South Korean capital of Seoul in a demonstration against Indian guarding P.O.W.'s who have refused to go home.

It also came amid renewed threats by South Korean leaders to drive out the Indians—who they denounce as pro-Communist.

Thimayya said "we are not concerned if South Korea threatens us because we have the huge United Nations command" and Communist forces "at our disposal."

He said the U.N. Command was responsible for preventing South Korean troops from entering the neutral zone to attack Indian forces.

Thimayya did not comment on a letter sent to him today by Gen. Mark W. Clark in which the retiring Far East commander said the U.N. will not waver from the principle of freedom of choice for the 22,500 anti-Communist prisoners in Indian custody.

Clark said the U.N. had shed blood to win that right and will not compromise.

He accused the five-nation repatriation commission—of which India is chairman—of working on the false idea that the reluctant prisoners "actually desire repatriation."

Thimayya said it was "highly likely" that the long-delayed issue of the balking P.O.W.'s would be decided next Tuesday.

Allied and Communist teams were to have begun meeting with the prisoners Sept. 26 in an attempt to persuade them to return home, but a dispute over facilities for the interviews forced postponement.

Thimayya said the "explanations" could begin as soon as the U.N. command finishes temporary housing for the prisoners.

The U.N.C. said the job would take about seven days.

Six Change Their Minds.

Meanwhile, the commission reported five North Korean and one Chinese P.O.W. changed their minds and will be turned over to the Communists Wednesday.

This brings to 116 the number of "captured" Communist soldiers who refused repatriation, but have asked to be returned since being handed over to the commission.

About 27,000 anti-Communist Korean prisoners broke from U.N. prison compounds under orders from South Korea's President Syngman Rhee last summer.

Thimayya acknowledged that the commission had not definitely decided what to do if the prisoners refuse to attend interviews.

He added, however, that he expected the "physical impossibility" of the commission to force P.O.W.'s to listen to "explanations."

"I think we can ask the prisoners to listen for five or 10 minutes," he said.

Asked what the commission would do if an entire compound of prisoners staged a sit-down strike rather than meet with the agents, he replied:

"I don't know what we could do. I suppose I'd have to refer to the commission."

Clark, in his letter to Thimayya, denounced the commission ruling that all P.O.W.'s must attend the interviews—whether they want to or not.

He said the U.N. Command "cannot now condone any abrogation or compromise of the Korean war truce terms."

"It would seem," Clark wrote, "that the commission has not taken full cognizance of the fact that the Korean and Chinese prisoners made their choice many months ago and that, in the absence of force or coercion, the vast majority will adhere to their decision."

He challenged the commission to determine "the personal feelings and desires" of the anti-Red prisoners "as to their attitude."

COURT RULES CALLING MAN A RED FALSELY IS SLANDER

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Oct. 6 (AP)—The Florida supreme court ruled today that falsely calling a man a Communist is slander.

The court ruled in the case of a man who had been charged with having a "loathsome state of mind."

The supreme court overruled the action of Duval county circuit court judge Charles A. Luckie in dismissing a slander suit brought by Gregory G. Joannakos of Jacksonville Beach against J. L. Gavanagh. The court reinstated the suit.

PRESIDENT SAYS BOMBS ARE NEEDED TO DETER ATTACK; WEST WORKS ON PACT FOR RUSSIA, DULLES REPORTS

WOULD CONTAIN PLEDGE AGAINST GERMAN REVIVAL OF MILITARISM

Secretary Says U.S. Will Assure Soviets It Won't Use Austria or Korea as Bases for Attack.

By WALLACE R. DEUEL
Diplomatic Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—The United States, Britain, France and West Germany are trying to work out the terms of a non-aggression pact giving assurances to Russia against a revival of German militarism, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said today.

The United States would also be glad to give Russia formal assurances it will not use either Austria or Korea as bases for hostile action against the Soviet Union, Dulles told a news conference.

The American Government is still seeking concrete evidence that Moscow's intentions are peaceful, as the Soviets claim, Dulles further declared.

The United States will not give anything in reliance on Russian promises this country can't be sure will be complied with, he added.

Beyond Previous Indications.

Dulles' comments today went considerably beyond any previous high-level public indications as to how far the United States might be prepared to go in working out non-aggression agreements.

British Prime Minister Churchill made the original proposal for a "Locarno-type" security treaty including Russia. West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer later endorsed this proposal and Adlai E. Stevenson put it forward again in a speech in Chicago Sept. 15.

Dulles today said he was in substantial agreement with Senator Knowland (Rep., California), Senate majority leader, who said yesterday he would oppose any non-aggression pact which left Soviet satellites under Communist rule.

Dulles referred, in this connection, to his speech of Sept. 17 before the United Nations General Assembly in New York, in which he said that no peace could be lasting which violated a principle of self-determination. This was the substance of what Knowland had said, the Secretary declared.

Recent Soviet actions have hardly tended to bear out Moscow's protestations that its intentions are peaceful, Dulles said.

Notes Attitude on Conference.

He noted as examples of a disabbling attitude on the Red's part their obstructionist attitude toward the proposed Korean political conference, their refusal to agree to an Austrian peace settlement and their putting forward of a proposal for a five-power conference, including Red China, in connection with the Western powers' call for a four-power meeting on Germany.

We are not going to allow ourselves to be discouraged so long

BYRNES REJECTS SOVIET DEAL ON U.N. MEMBERS, DENOUNCES VETO

U.S. Delegate in First Speech in Assembly Supports Peruvian Plan for Good-Offices Committee.

By ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 6.—James F. Byrnes told a United Nations special political committee yesterday that 14 Western-sponsored nations are entitled to U.N. membership but have been excluded "solely and entirely by the one vote of the Soviet Union in the Security Council."

The South Carolina Governor and former Secretary of State, making his first speech as a United States delegate to the current Assembly session, served notice, however, that the United States was still unwilling to accept the Soviet "package deal" to admit five Red satellites as the price of getting the Soviet veto lifted.

Malik Repeats Proposal. Soviet delegate Jacob Malik, in a speech before the committee on Friday, had repeated Russia's proposal: No Soviet veto of Western applicants if the West would admit Albania, the Mongolian People's Republic, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary to U.N. membership.

Byrnes called for the admission of Italy, Japan, Iran, Portugal, Austria, Finland, South Korea, Ceylon, Libya, Nepal, Jordan, Cambodia, Laos and Viet Nam. The Russian deal included all but five of these—Japan, South Korea, Laos, Cambodia and Viet Nam.

"We are most eager, when a solution is found, to welcome all qualified applicant states to full membership," Byrnes said. "Their place is ready for them. We are not concerned here, as some have suggested, with the internal structure, policies or ideology of any of the five Soviet-sponsored candidates for membership."

"Our concern is whether they are states that are peace-loving and able and willing to fulfill their obligations. The Security Council has no right to want by that standard. The Soviet Union, however, insists we ignore the record and the charter and admit these candidates."

Says 3 Violate Treaties. Byrnes said the Mongolian republic had not yet proven that it was "in truth" an independent state. He added that Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania have "disregarded and violated important provisions of the peace treaties made with those states."

He said that the United States supports a Peruvian proposal for a three-nation good offices committee to try to negotiate some way out of the membership deadlock.

"We do not now see the way to an acceptable solution in light of the attitude of the Soviet world," Byrnes declared. "However, we do want to leave the door open."

Byrnes directed his most pointed remarks to the prospective review of the U.N. charter which Western nations, led by the United States, are promoting with the idea of modifying the veto privilege in connection with the blackballing of nations.

"As we look ahead to the future," Byrnes said, "we should bear in mind the prospect of a charter review conference. Every proposed amendment should receive most careful consideration. If, by the time such a conference is held, a solution of the membership problem has not been found, there will be proposals to deal with it by an amendment to the charter."

Britain also rejected the "package deal" offered by the Soviet Union and endorsed the Peruvian idea.

Sir Gladwyn Jebb said that in the past the Soviet Union had consistently blocked admission of members it disapproved, regardless of the facts involving the respective applicants.

The committee continued the debate on membership today.

London Newspapers Protest Against Veil About Military Movements Toward Restive Guiana Colony.

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP)—British dispatches the 9100-ton cruiser Sheffield from Scotland to the West Indies today, sending the warship to the doorstep of its restless South American colony of British Guiana.

The Admiralty described the cruiser's departure as a "normal station move," but London newspapers already were blasting the Government for the veil of official secrecy dropped over previously reported movements of troops and naval vessels toward the troubled colony.

The Daily Telegraph, one of the strongest supporters of Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative Cabinet, asserted the "official attempts" had not concealed the facts. . . . that British warships carrying troops are steaming at top speed for Georgetown, capital of British Guiana, in an attempt to forestall a threatened Communist-directed insurrection in that colony.

Other newspapers and news agencies have said flatly that British warships carrying troops are on the way to Georgetown.

Admiralty Is Mute. The Admiralty, however, still refused to confirm or deny reports that the 9000-ton cruiser Superb with 400 troops aboard and the 1600-ton frigate Bigsby were due at Georgetown tomorrow from Kingston, Jamaica.

The British Government announced that Henry Hopkinson, Minister of State for Colonies, has been ordered to visit British Guiana Oct. 19.

British Guiana has been seething ever since the leftist People's Progressive party (P.P.P.), led by United States-born Janet Rosenberg Jagan and her East Indian dentist husband, Cheddi Jagan, won a sweeping victory in last April's colonial election.

Jagan, now Prime Minister, and his party demand almost complete independence from British rule. A series of strikes has paralyzed the sugar industry, the main source of income for the colony's 437,000 people. There also have been sporadic dock strikes.

Britain's Colonial Office, which supervises the colony, has described the P.P.P. as a Red-style organization but Mrs. Jagan has denied that she and her husband are Communists.

"Wall of Secrecy." Other London newspapers also attacked the Government for its silence. Describing it as a "wall of secrecy unparalleled in peacetime," the News Chronicle (Liberal) said the policy had been set up "on the express orders of Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton to mask British troop movements in the Caribbean."

The Daily Mail (Conservative) declared the British public was "entitled to proper information." Dispatches from Jamaica reported 40 members of the British garrison in British Honduras had been flown to supply a "skeleton force" at Britain's Caribbean command headquarters in Kingston.

This implied that the Superb had embarked all available troops in Jamaica. The cruiser, flagship of Britain's West Indies fleet, also has aboard V. Adm. Sir William Andrewes, commander in chief of the Royal Navy's America and West Indies station.

Government sources in London indicated privately that the force would be used to strengthen Sir Alfred W. Savage, Governor of the colony, in dealing with the situation.

Mrs. Jagan's party has demanded the replacement of Savage and a drastic reduction of the Governor's powers.

BENSON MAY TRY TO REVIVE FARM 'TWO-PRICE' IDEA

Rules Out Direct Support for Meat—Blames Democrats for 'Mess.'

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (UP)—The "two-price" plan for farm supports, born and then buried in the 1920s, got a new lease on life today as the Eisenhower Administration turned thumbs down on direct supports for sagging meat prices.

In a major speech before the American Meat Institute last night, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said the Federal Government would not support beef on the producer level, nor would it buy for storage to "peg" the market.

Later Benson said at a press conference that his department may try to revive interest in the two-price system of supports and said there had been talk on Capitol Hill of reviving the old proposal.

He explained that under the two-price system, a farmer with 1000 bushels of wheat would sell part, say 600 bushels, at Government support prices and market the remainder at prevailing world prices.

In his speech, Benson attributed dropping cattle and lamb prices that have caught livestock men in a "cost-price" squeeze to the "misguided" attempts of the recent Democratic Administration to suppress inflation with price controls.

Says Situation Is Improved. Benson acknowledged the gravity of the farmers' plight, particularly in critical drought areas, but said "the situation is already much more stabilized."

"The American people literally are eating us out of the best problem," he said. "Meat is going into stomachs and not into storage."

Benson said his advisers, including cattlemen themselves, have opposed direct price support subsidies by the Government on field crops. He said he will not recommend any.

A group of independent cattlemen in the Southwest drought area has demanded supports on the producer level, but Benson's remarks evidently closed the door on their pleas.

Won't "Peg" Market. He said the Administration would not buy beef to "peg" the market, nor will it buy and store heavy stocks of beef "to hang over for future markets."

He said the Government will continue to buy meat in emergencies in the market place for direct use, and cited the decision to buy beef, gravy and hamburger for school lunch programs in the drought as an example.

It was the "loose and unsound" policies of the Truman Administration that bred the "serious" price situation and "present livestock mess," Benson said.

He said unrealistic prices led to overproduction of cattle, thus forcing the price down. He said "great damage was done before the G.O.P. leadership removed price controls and relaxed meat grading regulations."

"A careful look at the present situation, and at what lies ahead offers grounds for reassurance to the livestock industry," he said. "Without being over-optimistic, there is reason to believe that it may be passing through a phase of the painful adjustment."

STEVENSON PLAN FOR SOVIET PACT HIT BY KNOWLAND

G.O.P. Senate Leader Also Assails What He Calls India's Yielding to Red China.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Senator Knowland (Rep., California), let fly yesterday with a double-barreled blast against the kind of non-aggression pact with Russia proposed by Adlai E. Stevenson and against what he termed yielding by India to some Red China policies.

Knowland is Republican floor leader in the Senate, but he maintained that he was speaking for himself, not as a member of the Eisenhower Administration.

There was no White House comment, but Senator Green (Dem., Rhode Island) said: "I hope he is not reflecting White House views. . . . Does he think we can fight the whole world alone?"

Fresh from weekend conferences with President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Knowland told a news conference he would oppose any pact guaranteeing Russia's borders unless the Soviet Union agreed in advance to free elections in its satellite nations.

In the Chicago speech Sept. 13 in which he proposed mutual non-aggression assurances, Stevenson also referred to withdrawal of the Red army behind Russian borders in these words: "If the Soviet Union rejects assurances of non-aggression, if the Red army will not withdraw behind its borders, if an Austrian peace treaty and German unification are impossible except on the Soviet's terms, then we will at least have cleared the air."

Knowland verbally spanked Prime Minister Nehru of India. He said Nehru speaks for only a part of Asia, and that if Nehru's voice was paramount the ultimate Communization of Asia would be in prospect.

Knowland just returned from a world tour, accused India of "yielding to the policies of the Chinese Communists before there is any peace conference in Korea" and "handicapping the peace as they handicapped the war."

Senator Green, like Knowland a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the Republican leader "sounds like the small boy watching a parade who said 'Everybody's out of step but my papa.'"

"I hope he is not reflecting White House views," Green said. "Can't we get on with anyone? Does he think we can fight the whole world alone? It's unfortunate he has to put these views on record at such a critical time as we're having in the Korean affair."

At his news conference yesterday, Knowland said that if the Soviets were offered a non-aggression pact without conditions, the action would be tantamount to freezing the battlelines behind the Iron Curtain.

"Unless the Soviet Union would allow free elections in East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania and

Gen. Clark Says Farewell To Men of Far East Command

Honor Guard Salutes Retiring Commander as He Prepares to Return to U.S.

TOKYO, Oct. 6 (AP)—Leaning Gen. Mark Clark said farewell today to the troops of his Far East Command.

At a colorful honor guard ceremony he said goodbye to a selected group of Korean veterans—soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines—and the top officers of the Far East and United Nations commands he has led since the spring of 1952.

An honor guard band saluted the veteran of 40 years of Army service with a briskly-rendered "So Long, It's Been Good to Know You" and "California, Here I Come." Clark retires Oct. 31.

The band, led by Auld Lang Syne and Clark shook hands with his successor, Gen. John E. Hull and U.N. and United States Far East officers.

Clark took command in the Far East May 2, 1952, succeeding Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway. During his command, prisoner of war riots were quelled, combat flared across the Korean battlefield, and an armistice was signed, ending three years of war.

Clark also received the praise of British Prime Minister Churchill.

It would be a mistake to enter into the type of pact suggested by Adlai Stevenson," he said.

"To do so, would be to make permanent the condition of the people of those nations, who are being subjected to Soviet tyranny. It would not be peace with honor but another Yalta or Munich."

Knowland said Nehru is a leader who is confronted with almost insurmountable problems at home, and one who speaks only for India and possibly Indonesia and Burma. Knowland characterized the latter two as "neutralist" states.

"He does not speak for Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Formosa, Thailand, Indochina, Pakistan or Ceylon," Knowland declared.

Out of those nations, the California Senator said, he thinks substantial free world forces can be built which would deter any Communist aggression in that part of the world.

He said the tip-off on Communist intentions in Asia will come when it is made clear whether the Reds want any peace conference on Korea.

Business Women's Week. JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 6 (UP)—Gov. Donnelly today issued an executive proclamation designating the period of Oct. 11-17 inclusive as "Business Women's Week" and called upon all Missouri citizens to join in its observance.

Investigators said Jensen told them it was he who, as a youth, had killed 13-year-old Billy Williams, La. Crescenta. Authorities said that if Piper dies, Jensen will be held for murder.

M'KAY RULES OUT NEW PROJECTS IN PATTERN OF TVA

Says He Is Against Turning Public Plants Over to Private Utilities, However.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Secretary of the Interior McKay said yesterday he is sure the Eisenhower Administration will not seek to set up any new power projects like the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"Any attempt to establish public power projects should be made by the people of the area concerned," McKay said in a copyrighted interview in the weekly news magazine U.S. News & World Report.

"I would never stand in the way of such a program," he said, but added that he is "violently opposed" to the Government telling any community what is good for it.

McKay said he nevertheless felt that the Government would have to build large, multiple-purpose dams, "particularly in the Northwest and the Missouri basin—and perhaps there are some in the Southwest."

It is impossible for private enterprise or local public agencies to handle the job, he said, because such things as flood control, irrigation and navigation would not bring in sufficient revenue.

McKay said the Federal Government should enter the power field only to "do the things that are necessary, instead of trying to take over the whole field."

Asked if he would favor a TVA-type project for the Missouri basin, McKay replied: "I am not in sympathy with the 'authority' idea. I am opposed to it as a basic philosophy of government."

McKay said he had visited the TVA and "it is a beautiful project and if the people in that area want it, it is none of my worry."

"As a policy of the present Administration," he declared, "I am sure we will not try to expand that theory to some other part of the country."

McKay said, however, the Administration should not turn over any TVA power plants to private utilities.

Stress on balancing the budget is ruling out new Government dams now McKay said, but he added one might be started in 1955. He also noted that three billion dollars is available this year for planning future reclamation projects.

PRESIDENT SAYS NATION HAS NO CHOICE BUT ARMS of radio and television speeches. The President pledged that if it is within his power, "with God's help," atomic power will be put to peaceful rather than destructive uses.

Eisenhower said Russia's possession of atomic weapons, and long-range bombers to deliver them, wipes out the security against air attack that this nation has previously had.

"While our homes have witnessed scarcely any of the horrors of the battlefield that are so familiar to citizens of western Europe," he said, "we know that their unique physical security has almost totally disappeared before the long-range bomber and the destructive power of a single bomb."

"He warned that world peace cannot be achieved suddenly by force, by edict, or by treaty," he said it can come "only slowly and tortuously."

Peace Born of Courage.

"It will not be won by dark threats or glittering slogans," the President said. "It will be born only of courage, knowledge, patience, leadership."

Eisenhower stressed that the responsibility of United States leadership in the quest for "just and durable" peace is the responsibility of every American.

"I say emphatically that this leadership depends no less directly upon the faith, the courage, the love of freedom and the capacity for sacrifice of every American citizen, every American home, every American community," he said.

"For this all-important task, he said, the United States and its citizens must make 'each life, each home, each community more worthy of the trust it bears for all mankind.'"

Eisenhower said Russia is the menace to world peace.

"The mysteries of the atom are known to Russia. Russia's hostility to free government—and to the religious faith on which free government is built—is too well-known to require recital here," he said. On the other hand, he said, the free world "is inspired by its unbreakable will to preserve its freedom and security."

The President said "unshakable faith in yourselves, your country and your God . . . is the prime strength of our nation."

Faith, he said, is underrated by some.

"Of course, the cynic—or the Marxist, or the worshiper of machines and numbers—will scoff that faith is no armor against artillery, that the spirit weakens fast before the blast of the bomb," he said.

"But your husbands and brothers and fathers can testify that in the terrifying nakedness of the battlefield, the faith and the spirit of men are the keys to survival and victory."

"Faith is evidently too simple a thing for some to recognize its paramount worth. Yet the present and the future demand men and women who are firm in their faith in our country and in their faith in their service to her."

(St. Louis radio station KMOX will rebroadcast the President's address at 9:45 o'clock tonight.)

VEILED PROPHET TO CROWN 53D QUEEN TONIGHT

Concert at 8:42, a group of 75 Ladies of Honor will begin entering the ballroom to take up their seats at either side of the Prophet's throne.

With appropriate musical accompaniment, the Ladies of Honor, escorted by members of the Veiled Prophet order in evening dress, will file slowly around the glittering horseshoe of box seats to the north end of the hall where the coronation will take place.

At 9:05, the 26 Maids of Honor will follow in procession, each with her escort and each bowing to the former Queens, to the dais where the royal chair of state stands against a blue background hung with gold brocade.

The retiring Queen, Miss Sally Baker Shepley, will make her appearance at 9:16 o'clock at the south entrance beneath the musicians' gallery, where all principals enter. Miss Shepley will share the Veiled Prophet's throne until a moment shortly before the announcement of her successor.

Following in sequence will be the entries of the Krewes, masked revelers in costumes they will wear in tomorrow's parade, the potentate's Honor Guard of Bengal Lancers in turbans, red coats and black boots, and the appearance of the Veiled Prophet himself.

Monarch and His Retinue.

The heavily-veiled Monarch of Khorassan, whose identity is a closely-guarded secret, will proceed at stately pace to the dais, followed by his gorgeously-costumed retinue, at 9:36. His entrance will be accompanied, as usual, by playing of the Triumphant March from Verdi's "Aida."

Beginning at 9:45, with the entire court in readiness, His Majesty's Herald will announce the four Special Maids, second in rank only to the Queen. Each of these young women will enter at the south, make the long approach to the throne, receive her coronet and take her place on the dais.

High point of the annual spectacle will come at 10:18 o'clock with the coronation of the new Queen of Love and Beauty. Following the Dance of the Krewes and recessional of the Veiled Prophet and his court, the ball will begin.

Many guests will scatter almost immediately, however, to private suppers. The principal such function is the Queen's supper at Hotel Jefferson. Special arrangements have been made for handling traffic in vicinity of Kiel Auditorium tonight.

All automobiles headed for the auditorium must approach by moving eastward from Seventeenth and Market streets. Either the Fourteenth or the Fifteenth street entrances to Convention Hall may be used. Cards bearing directions for parking will be given to drivers of all vehicles, and passengers in chauffeur-driven vehicles will receive parking checks.

Numbers to be called. When their numbers are called after the ball, chauffeurs will pick up passengers at the Fifteenth street entrance, which they will approach by driving south on Sixteenth street to Clark avenue, east to Fifteenth and north to the entrance. Owner-driven machines will use the Fourteenth street entrance, approaching east on Market, south to the entrance, then south to Clark and east to Twelfth street.

Taxis will be available after the ball at the south end of the Fifteenth street canopy.

Tomorrow night's parade will begin at 7 o'clock at Ranken and Laclede avenues, moving over the same seven-mile route followed last year. Floats, carrying out a "Years of the Veiled Prophet" theme, will duplicate favorite designs seen in previous parades.

to get a newspaper. Since then, telephone calls for him have been taken by Paul Greenleaf and by Johnson.

Both have said that he "is resting and cannot be disturbed"—nothing more.

Eisenhower's Brother Calls.

The banker who called at the home last night is Arthur B. Eisenhower, brother of the President and executive vice president of the Commerce Trust Co. in the house. As he left he told reporters he could give them no information of any kind. He declined to say whether Ledgerman was there.

Joseph Williams, president of the Commerce Trust Co., told the elder Greenleaf early in the case that the bank was prepared to provide currency whenever needed.

Ledgerman lives at Tulsa, Okla. A check there with his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Kresger, brought the word that she had not heard from him since he left for Kansas City last week.

Another unusual development was the fact that a Catholic priest remained at the Greenleaf home until about 2 a.m. today after going there at 9:30 p.m. He drove away before news men could ask him for information. He was not the family pastor, who has called at the home several times. Two nuns spent 45 minutes there, yesterday afternoon.

Police Chief Bernard C. Brannon said he had no knowledge of any imminent break in the case.

In all these matters, we are working with a very great sense of urgency, and are trying to be imaginative, he added.

Dulles said in reply to a British correspondent's question that he was not aware of any renewal by Churchill of the Prime Minister's earlier proposal for a meeting of the Big Three Western chiefs of Government.

WEST WORKING ON NON-AGGRESSION PACT FOR RUSSIA

as there is any possible way to relieve international tensions, however, the Secretary asserted. The destructive power of atomic weapon and hydrogen weapons makes it essential to explore every possibility for securing peace, he said.

Asked if the Western powers are considering the possibility of a non-aggression pact which would guarantee existing borders, Dulles replied that there are many possible combinations and permutations which are under consideration and he felt he should not go into detail about them.

Dulles said that some of the positions might have strategic importance, he pointed out.

U. S. Would Reassure Reds.

If it would help for the United States to make it clear it has no intention of using Austria or Korea as hostile bases, this country will be glad to give such assurances, he declared.

Other North Atlantic treaty powers are being kept informed of the discussions of the proposed security treaty, the Secretary said in reply to a Dutch correspondent's question.

The United States is not entirely happy about some of the decisions taken by the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission now processing prisoners of war in Korea, Dulles said in response to another question. He declined, however, to comment on a charge made by Knowland that India is deliberately interfering with the Korean peace settlement just as it did, according to Knowland, with the prosecution of the Korean conflict.

We do not know where the responsibility lies for some of the commission's actions, Dulles said.

At the same time, he made it clear that he considers certain of these actions contrary to the truce terms.

2 SAILORS WHO SABOTAGED BRITISH CARRIER SENTENCED

DEVONPORT, England, Oct. 6 (AP)—Two stokers were sentenced to three years in prison and dismissed from the Royal Navy today on charges of committing damage aboard Britain's new aircraft carrier Eagle—including throwing the ship's entire stock of rum overboard.

The sailors, Trevor Davies, 18 years old, and John McLaughlin, 20, pleaded guilty. They testified at a courtmartial they felt they were getting even with the Navy for stopping their leaves.

They broke telephones, pressure gauges and boiler room equipment, pastored officers with mysterious threats over the ship's telephone before security police caught them.

3. She used a pin-up lamp with a 100-watt bulb to provide additional needed light for the kitchen table.

RUSSIAN ARMY DESERTER ASKS FOR U.S. ASYLUM

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—A 17-year-old Russian youth, Ivan Smirnov, who says he deserted from the Soviet army in East Germany and came to this country as a stowaway, surrendered to immigration authorities yesterday and asked for asylum as a refugee.

A spokesman for the Immigration Service said Ivan, who speaks only Russian and German, said he escaped from the Red army last month and met three French sailors who gave him clothes and smuggled him aboard their ship.

The ship arrived here last Thursday and Ivan was smuggled ashore. He was advised to seek help from Russian Orthodox Church leader who put him in touch with the Tolstoy Foundation, an organization set up to help refugee Russians. On the advice of its leaders, he surrendered.

Immigration officials said Ivan would not name the French sailors or ship on which he stowed away. The French liner Liberté docked here last Thursday.

Immigration officials said the youth will be held for a deportation hearing.

CUT IN TEACHERS' MATERNITY LEAVE URGED BY HICKEY

The shortage of school teachers is so acute that it will probably cause a reduction in the present length of maternity leave in the St. Louis public school system.

Philip J. Hickey yesterday recommended at a Board of Education Instruction Committee meeting that the present mandatory two-year maternity leave, without pay, be reduced to 18 months. A number of teachers on leave have sought to return before the end of the two-year period, he said.

This is not possible under the present rule, Hickey explained.

so some of these teachers have gone to work as substitutes in county schools. At present the St. Louis system has about 100 teachers on maternity leave, Hickey said, and if some of them return it will free their substitutes for other duties.

The committee approved the recommendation and forwarded the proposed rule change to the full board. It will come before its regular meeting next Tuesday night.

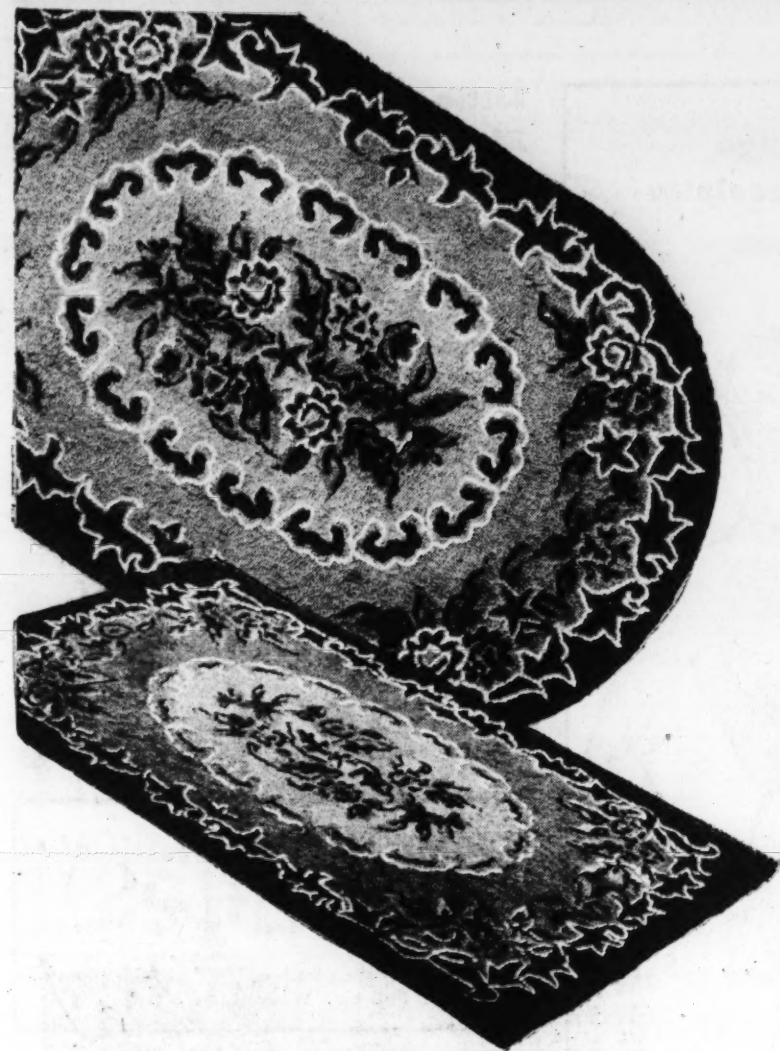

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH GOODWIN J. KNIGHT SWORN IN AS CALIFORNIA'S GOVERNOR

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6 (AP)—Goodwin J. (Goody) Knight was sworn in yesterday as California's thirty-first Governor.

The 56-year-old former Lieutenant Governor succeeded Earl Warren, who was sworn in at Washington as Chief Justice of the United States. Knight said "we shall confound the ivory tower cynics who keep telling the people that a give-away program is the only measure of true liberalism. I shall reject all the St. Vitus dance theories of radicalism."

The gubernatorial term expires next year. Knight previously has announced he would seek election to the full four-year term.

U.S.-RED CHINA
TALKS ON KOREAN
PARLEY URGED

U.N. Delegate Suggests
Face-to-Face Effort to Decide on Who Should Attend.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—An influential United Nations diplomat has suggested privately that the United States and Communist China hold face-to-face talks and try to work out their differences over who should attend the Korean political conference.

While making no formal proposal, this delegate—who was closely connected with arranging the Korean truce—said the two countries could thresh out the problem when and if their representatives meet to discuss details of time and place for the conference.

Chief United States Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. has offered on behalf of the United States Government to send an American representative to talk over these points with the Reds. The Communists so far have ignored the offer.

Parley Chances Dim.
Chances for the peace conference, scheduled to open not later than Oct. 28, appear dim at present because of Communist insistence that neutrals be invited. The U.N. already has adopted a United States plan barring neutrals.

Lodge told the General Assembly that the conference itself could take up the question of whether to invite such countries as India. He said it was a problem for "both sides"—the U.N. and the Reds—and both would be represented at the conference.

The new idea, advanced by the prominent neutral, was that "both sides" take up the issue when they meet to discuss technicalities. He said that, if they reached agreement, the United States could report the results to the General Assembly and any necessary action could be taken.

The United States delegation, saying it had not been approached formally with the idea, withheld comment.

A British spokesman said it was "a little early" to comment on the suggestion. He said his delegation preferred to wait until the Chinese Reds replied to the latest United States note on the conference.

That note offered to send a United States representative to Geneva, San Francisco or Honolulu to talk over technical details with a Chinese Red delegation.

RADIO BROADCASTS
CATHOLIC PROTEST TO RED POLAND

MUNICH, Germany, Oct. 6 (UP)—Twenty-one powerful transmitters of Radio Free Europe today beamed broadcasts to Poland of a hitherto secret Roman Catholic protest to the Red Polish regime.

The protest was drawn up by Poland's bench of bishops, and sent to Polish President Boleslaw Bierut last May. Its contents, until now, had been kept secret by both the church and the state.

The bishops said in their note that the Polish episcopate refused to respect church officials appointed by the state under a government decree of Feb. 9, 1953.

The bishops added the decree "cannot be considered as legal and binding" and warned that the church would exact "the heaviest punishment" against prelates who respected the appointments. The bishops said they would rather see church positions go unfilled than recognize the Communist government's authority in such religious functions.

those preliminary talks, some delegates said, it would be idle to authorize the United States representative to discuss additional subjects.

U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld was reported last night to have sent an oral message to Communist China acknowledging the recent communication from Peiping on the composition of the peace conference.

He also was said to have promised to keep Peiping informed of any further U.N. developments on the question.

Informed quarters said Hammarskjöld had sent the message through the Swedish Government which has diplomatic relations with the Chinese Communists. Hammarskjöld acted after Indian delegate V. K. Krishna Menon had criticized him in a speech for failure to send any sort of reply to the Chinese Communists.

QUADRUPLTS BORN TO GRANDMOTHER
IN AUSTRALIA

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 6 (UP)—Quadruplets were born early today to a 38-year-old grandmother in Gilgandra, a small sheep and agricultural town 326 miles northwest of Sydney.

The three girls and one boy were reported well after a normal birth. Their mother, Mrs. Ellis Hudson, wife of a contractor, has had nine other children. She had been expecting twins.

The Gilgandra District Hospital reported the boy weighs 2 pounds, 13 ounces, and the girls from 3 pounds, 5 ounces to 3 pounds, 13 ounces. The births extended over three and one half hours.

The Hudson family has been living in two tents outside Gilgandra. When Hudson heard of the multiple birth, he chuckled and said, "I suppose I'll have to buy another tent."

But New South Wales Housing Minister Clive Ewart promised the family a house.

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Gov. Phil M. Donnelly appointed two new members of the Kansas City board of election commissioners today and designated Hampton S. Chambers as board chairman.

Chambers, who is serving an unexpired term, was chairman of the Kansas City police board during Donnelly's first term. New election board members are Joseph B. Thompson, Republican, who succeeds Paul Van Osdel Jr., and David T. Cavanaugh, Democrat, who succeeds John W. Oliver, the former chairman. Thompson was designated secretary of the board, which controls registrations and elections in the state's second largest city. The fourth board member is Paul D. Walker, Republican, whose term expires next month.

MANUAL TRAINING SCHOOL
GRADUATES ATTEND REUNION

Graduates of the old Manual Training School, a boys' high school operated by Washington University until it was discontinued in 1918, gathered for a reunion last night at the Gatesworth Apartment Hotel.

The 93 graduates represented classes ranging from 1883 to 1917. Several men, including Army Maj. E. L. Brown (ret.), Manhattan Beach, Calif., made lengthy trips to attend the reunion. Thirteen members of the class of 1903, which had its fiftieth reunion celebration Sunday, were present.

A special guest was a former teacher, Miss Bertha C. Sessinghaus. The school was located at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue. Most of its students went into engineering and allied fields.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 6 (AP)—A light plane crashed in a wooded area near Elizabeth yesterday and killed two men. They were identified as Harold B. Weissman of Pittsburgh, and Nathan Prashker of Palisades, N.Y.

Witnesses said the plane, a four-seater Beechcraft Bonanza, lost a wing, slipped into a spin and crashed with the throttle wide open. They said the craft was about 500 feet up.

HENNINGSS CALLS
FOR U.S. DROUTH
ACTION AT ONCE

Charges Government Is Dragging Its Feet —
Thousands 'Facing
Ruin,' He Says.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (UP)—Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem., Missouri), demanded today that the Administration take "immediate action" on a hay lift and other relief proposals to save Missouri farmers from a "terrible drouth disaster."

In a telegram to Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson, Hennings charged the Government with dragging its feet in dealing with the crisis, although thousands are "facing ruin."

Hennings is in St. Louis and the telegram was released by his office here.

Hennings urged adoption of a six-point plan, including use of military planes and trucks to rush hay to the stricken area, low interest rate loans, and a speed-up in the distribution of Government seed.

He first outlined this plan in a wire to President Eisenhower Sept. 29. In a wire to Benson three days later, Hennings and Missouri's Gov. Phil M. Donnelly again urged emergency action, including a federally-financed cut in railroad rates for hay shipments.

In his latest message to Benson, Hennings said Missouri farmers were "desperately" waiting for the Administration's reply to these proposals.

"I am informed that the director of your drouth relief program is on his way to Missouri with a congressional committee to hold informal hearings," Hennings told the Secretary.

"We are glad to have these gentlemen come, but the Missouri farmers are faced with a crisis and congressional hearings cannot be of immediate effect."

"What the committee will learn will be of benefit next year, but we need help now. As it stands, thousands of Missouri farmers are waiting for your reply to the various proposals for relief submitted to you. I hope we can have immediate action."

Hay Buying Under Way—Donnelly Awaits U.S. Reply.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 6 (UP)—Hay buying in northern states was under way today as Gov. Phil M. Donnelly waited word on a plan to reduce the cost of the badly needed livestock feed.

Donnelly expressed surprise that he had not received "even an acknowledgement" of wires urging that charges be removed from shipments of hay into Missouri drouth areas.

L. C. Carpenter, State Commissioner of Agriculture, said farmers to date had ordered about 3300 tons of hay. He said five buyers already were filling the orders from surplus hay supplies in South Dakota.

The Governor and United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings jointly wired the railroads and the United States Department of Agriculture last Saturday suggesting that the railroad industry and the Federal Government split the transportation costs.

LOW BIDDER FOR ANNEX ON STATE HIGHWAY OFFICE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 6—Award of a contract for construction of a two-story annex to the division office of the State Highway Department in Kirkwood, to the Gamble Construction Co. of St. Louis, was announced today by the State Highway Commission. The cost will be $145,200, it was said.

The addition, two stories and a basement, will be built at the rear of the present division office building, 329 South Kirkwood road. It will provide additional office and laboratory space, and drafting rooms and offices for the surveys and plans bureau.

The 1953 Legislature authorized an appropriation of $150,000 of state highway funds for construction of the addition.

MAN 'SHOT,' KILLED BY NAIL FROM AUTOMATIC NAILER

TEMPLE CITY, Calif., Oct. 6 (AP)—An automatic nailer, powered by blank cartridges, is blamed by sheriff's deputies for the death of one workman and serious injury of another in a freak accident.

Carl Mitchell, an engraver, was killed, and Harry Fisher, also an engraver, was injured at the Miller Dial and Name Plate Co. plant yesterday.

In an adjoining room carpenter Robert Becker was installing plasterboard. Deputies said nails which missed the studding struck Mitchell in the heart and Fisher in the chest.

QUAKE NEAR KAMCHATKA

PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 6 (AP)—A severe earthquake centered near the Kamchatka peninsula off Russian Siberia was recorded Sunday night on California Institute of Technology seismograph.

Seismologists said it was one of a series of tremors which have been shaking the area since a major shock occurred last year and had a magnitude of 6.8, strong enough to cause heavy damage near the epicenter.

Aid Spending Supervisor.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Appointment of Walter Marden Ringer as European Director of the Foreign Operations Administration was announced yesterday by Harold E. Stassen, F.O.A. Administrator. Ringer, chairman of the board of the Foley Manufacturing Co., Minneapolis, will supervise the spending of foreign aid funds in Europe.

ANOTHER EGYPT EX-OFFICIAL GETS LIFE FOR TREASON

Former Cabinet Minister Faraq Accused of 'Conspiracy With Foreign Power.'

CAIRO, Oct. 6 (AP)—Former Wafdist Minister Ibrahim Faraq was sentenced to life imprisonment by a special revolutionary court today for high treason and "conspiracy with a foreign power against state security."

He was the third person convicted in a week on similar charges. More than 20 Egyptians accused of plotting against President Mohammed Naguib's government are still awaiting trial before the three-man tribunal.

There has been no official identification of the foreign power allegedly implicated in the plot. Unofficial sources have variously identified it as Russia and an eastern Mediterranean nation allied with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Faraq, who served as Egypt's Minister of State and Information Minister from 1950 to 1952, pleaded not guilty at the start of his one-day trial yesterday. Testimony in the case was heard in secret.

The former Minister was one of the most influential members of the Wafdist party, headed by former Premier Mustafa el Nahas. Nahas and his wife are among those still awaiting trial. The court earlier convicted Saadist party leader Ibrahim Abdel Hadi, who served as Premier during the 1949 Palestine war, and Ahmed Mohamed Awad, an Egyptian electrician formerly employed by the British in the Suez canal zone. Both were condemned to death but the nation's governing Revolutionary Council yesterday commuted their sentences to life imprisonment.

'VICTIM' IN $24,600 SWINDLE IS INDICTED AS CONSPIRATOR

HENDERSON, Ky., Oct. 6.—Roy B. Laxton, a St. Louis lumber hauler, yesterday was indicted on a conspiracy charge in a $24,600 swindle a year ago in which he was a purported victim.

Laxton, who gave an address in the 1400 block of Graham street, was named with James G. Webb, Evansville, Ind., in a conspiracy indictment returned by the county grand jury. Laxton and Henry Cernieck, a St. Louis county contractor, reported last Oct. 24 they were working on a lumber deal with Webb, who asked to see their money. Laxton said he produced $9800 and Cernieck said he had $14,800, all in $100 bills. When they got the money back, after Webb excused himself, they discovered that $1 bills had been substituted for the $100 notes, they told authorities.

ATHENS, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Hungarian Red Cross announced yesterday it is ready to surrender 600 Greek hostages abducted by Communist guerrillas between 1947 and 1949 and now held in Hungary.

Expenses of repatriation will be borne by Greece. The date and place of the surrender will be decided later.

ALASKA SEALSKIN PRICES FALL OFF 14.3 PCT. AT SALE

Average price of Alaska sealskins was 14.3 per cent lower at yesterday's fall auction at the Fouke Fur Co. than at last spring's sale, and top black Alaskas were down 2.9 per cent in price, a company spokesman announced last night.

"That's a fairly good showing, considering the current business decline," the spokesman observed. The black Alaska skins brought an average price of $96.17. The best one sold for $131, or $4 more than the top spring price.

A larger proportion of skins were bought for European furs than in any previous auction here, it was noted. About 39,000 skins were sold for a total of $2,241,547, of which $1,944,920 was for Alaska skins. The rest were shipped from Uruguay and South Africa. Sixty buyers took part in spirited bidding at the sale. The Fouke firm is the only agency authorized to conduct sealskin auctions in the United States.

MEXICO PUSHES HUNT FOR SWAIN KILLERS

250 Suspects Arrested, Ex-St. Louisan's Wife Unable to Identify Any.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 6 (UP)—Federal police today pushed their investigation of the high-way holdup killing of Ralph B. Swain, former St. Louisan, who was shot by four highwaymen Saturday before his horrified wife and two children as they were returning to Managua from a brief leave in the United States.

Authorities paraded a large number of suspects before Swain's wife, Suzanne, but she did not single out any of the suspects.

Troops, under orders to get the killers dead or alive, were rounding up suspects. More than 250 had been brought in for questioning thus far.

Arrangements were being made for the cremation of the body of Swain, an entomologist assigned to Nicaragua by the Point IV Technical Assistance Administration. The ashes will be sent to St. Louis for burial Wednesday morning. Mrs. Swain and the two boys may accompany them if the official Mexican investigation of the killing can be completed by that time.

A Mexican Foreign Ministry official visited Mrs. Swain last night to present the Government's official condolences.

REDS SAY U.S. SOLDIER ASKS FOR ASYLUM IN EAST-REICH

BERLIN, Oct. 6 (AP)—The official East German news agency ADN said today an American soldier had renounced his citizenship and requested political asylum in the Communist east zone because "he does not agree with the policy of the United States Government."

ADN gave his name as Norman Lowell Jr. A United States Army announcement said a soldier by that name leaped from a military train in the Soviet zone Sept. 12 while being taken from Berlin to West Germany to serve a guardhouse sentence. The Army gave his age as 23 and said he was from Somerville, Mass.

ADN said also that two Dutch soldiers had requested political asylum in the east zone on the same day as Lowell. ADN quoted the Dutchmen as saying the "American way of life" was exerting a bad influence on Dutch youth.

ITALY'S DEPUTIES VOTE TO DEMAND ALL OF TRIESTE

Premier Says Solution of Issue Would Facilitate Nation's OK of Army Pact.

ROME, Oct. 6 (UP)—The Chamber of Deputies unanimously approved tonight a resolution demanding the return of the entire disputed Trieste territory to Italy.

Cheers rang out in the chamber when every deputy present raised his hand in support of the resolution, introduced by members of the governmental Christian Democratic party and the Liberal party.

Before the resolution was adopted Premier Giuseppe Pella told the chamber that Italy's ratification of the European army pact would be "greatly facilitated" if the Trieste issue were solved first.

Pella made a sweeping survey of Italian relations with nearly every country in the world in closing debate on foreign affairs in the chamber of deputies.

In appealing for a settlement of the dispute with Yugoslavia over Trieste, Pella did not say Italy would not ratify the European army pact unless there was a solution. His theme was ratification would be easier if Trieste were out of the way.

As he spoke, Pella was awaiting a reply from the Western Allies to his proposal that there be a plebiscite to determine the future of Trieste.

The Rome newspaper Il Messaggero reported from Washington that a Western note would arrive this week and that the three Allies had decided to let Italy administer Zone A. The Rome newspaper Momento Sera carried a similar report. Neither gave a source for the report.

WILLIAM H. DANFORTH HEADS CAROLS GROUP 29TH TIME

William H. Danforth, chairman of the board of Ralston Purina Co., was installed as president of the St. Louis Christmas Carolers Association yesterday for his twenty-ninth consecutive term, it was announced.

With the installation of Danforth at the board meeting, the association opened its forty-second season of its community-wide caroling program. Mrs. Albert H. Toma, executive secretary, said offices have been opened at 513 Olive street and recruitment of singing groups will start immediately for Christmas eve caroling.

She said more than 50,000 carolers will be needed this year in order that every house with a "welcoming light in the window" will be visited. More than 70 local agencies and institutions for handicapped and underprivileged children will receive funds donated to carolers. Groups wishing to participate in the 1953 caroling program should call Chestnut 4970.

WAITER FREED ON CHARGE OF SUNDAY LIQUOR SALE

A charge of selling intoxicating liquor on Sunday, brought against Elijah A. Dixon, a waiter at Club Riviera, 4458 Delmar boulevard, following a raid by members of the police liquor squad Aug. 2, was dismissed today by Police Judge Robert G. Dowd.

Dowd discharged Dixon, a Negro, after his attorney pointed out that the particular section of the city ordinance under which Dixon was charged makes it unlawful for "a person having a license" to sell intoxicating liquor on Sunday. Dowd held the provision was not applicable to Dixon because he was not the licensee.

Jordan W. Chambers, Democratic committeeman of the Nineteenth Ward and owner of the night club, was fined $350 in police court on the same charge Aug. 18. He has appealed. His city license was suspended for five days and his state license suspended for a week as a result of the raid.

GRANITE CITY WAGE OFFER REJECTED BY RETAIL CLERKS

An offer of a wage increase of 4 cents an hour by Granite City stores, represented by the Associated Retailers and Civic Association, was rejected last night by Local 435, AFL Retail Clerks' Union, which is on strike against about 28 of the stores.

Jack Falk, secretary of District 1 of the union, said some 29 stores had agreed to the 10-cent-an-hour increase sought by the union, with the final rate to be established when all the member stores have signed up. These stores are now open for business.

An attempt to set up a further negotiating session next

Thursday with the Associated Retailers and Civic Association is being made, he said.

FRENCH DEPUTIES MEET TO DECIDE LANEL'S FATE

Premier Reported Ready to Defend Policies — Reds Call Off Protest Strike.

PARIS, Oct. 6 (UP) — The French National Assembly met today in special session to decide whether to end the 11-week-old government of Premier Joseph Laniel.

Observers believed the divided Assembly will call a political truce and permit the Government to stand until the election of a new President of the republic in December.

The Communists called off their 24-hour protest strike against the Government scheduled to coincide with the reconvening of the Assembly after a two-and-one-half month summer vacation.

Instead, the Reds ordered a demonstration march on the Assembly. French riot police took up positions as a precaution against disorders, but when Assembly President Edouard Herriot banged down his gavel at opening the session, fewer than 100 demonstrators had turned up. They went away quietly after their spokesman presented a petition protesting against policies of Premier Laniel.

Laniel called a Cabinet meeting for tomorrow and was reported ready to face the Assembly with a full-dress defense of his foreign and domestic policies starting Thursday or Friday.

The Premier was expected to deliver a major speech defending his policies in an effort to cut down Communist and Socialist opposition. Petitions by Communist and Socialist Deputies forced the Assembly to meet a week ahead of time.

The Socialists, who were instrumental in the recall of the Assembly by sparking one of France's worst strike waves last August, were embarrassed last night by a Communist bid to step into the Reds' parlor to join hands in a common program.

A four-point program to veto Laniel's decree laws which touched off the August strikes was offered by the Communists. Success would mean the end of the Government and possibly new elections.

However, the bitterly anti-Communist Socialists were not expected to accept the bid which was regarded as an attempt to snatch the initiative from the Communists and capitalize on the propaganda value of a return to the pre-war "popular front."

This session may be France's last chance to ratify the European army pact before the United States tires of waiting for the French to approve the treaty to rearm Germany.

Pinay Says France Must Increase Production.
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6 (AP) — Antoine Pinay, former Premier of France, said yesterday the economic salvation of his country lies solely in increasing domestic production and not through financial and military aid from the United States.

Considered one of his country's leading industrial and economic experts, Pinay is here to confer with bankers and business men "for my own information in my capacity as a private individual."

"France needs a prosperous economy to be able to support the difficult burdens caused by the war in Indochina and the administration of affairs in Morocco," he said.

"We need dollars and pounds to bolster our internal economy and to buy raw materials for our factories. We have to work and produce so we can increase exports and bring profits back in dollars and pounds."

"The help the United States had given us in Indochina certainly lightens our burden," Pinay continued, "but it does not solve the problems, as our entire economy has to be reorganized."

DROPS HABEAS CORPUS PLEA FOR CUSTODY OF CHILDREN
An application for a writ of habeas corpus, filed by Mrs. Winifred Stehman to regain custody of her two children from juvenile authorities, was withdrawn in St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday.

Her attorney, Harrison D. King, told the court she had agreed to permit the children, Karen, 3 years old, and Kenneth, 5 months, to remain in City Hospital for treatment pending a hearing before Juvenile Judge James F. Nangle on neglect charges in about 30 days.

The children were taken from the Stehman living quarters, back of a tavern at 4873 Natural Bridge avenue, last Sept. 28 after complaints by neighbors. Judge Nangle ordered the children removed to City Hospital after an investigator reported they needed medical attention.

INDIA WANTS JAPAN IN ON ASIAN PEACE PARLEY
NEW DELHI, Oct. 6 (AP) — A foreign office spokesman said today that India's government "most certainly" favors Japanese participation in any general Asian peace settlement.

The spokesman said that the Sept. 28 speech to the United Nations by V. K. Krishna Menon, India's U.N. delegate, calling for more Asian nations to be represented in such a settlement, "did most certainly have in mind Japan."

"That is in accordance with Prime Minister Nehru's stated policy that major Far Eastern powers, such as China, Japan and others concerned, must have a voice in determining the region's future," he continued.

Menon's failure to mention Japan by name had aroused speculation in Tokyo that India felt the Japanese should be left out.

UNION ELECTRIC, MONSANTO JOINT ATOM STUDY ENDS

Initial Study Phase of Production of Electricity, Plutonium Concluded.

Union Electric Co. of Missouri and Monsanto Chemical Co. have concluded the initial study phase of their joint atomic electric project, and joint sponsorship of the project has ended, the two companies announced in a statement today.

The companies, the statement said, were authorized by the Atomic Energy Commission to conduct at their own expense a study of the feasibility of producing electric power and plutonium as co-products in a nuclear reactor owned and operated by private industry.

Although the companies' statement said merely that the study showed a reactor of the sodium-cooled, graphite-moderated type held promise, the results were sufficiently encouraging to prompt a request by the companies in 1952 for authority to build a $3,000,000 pilot plant. That request has not been granted by the AEC.

Monsanto is continuing its studies under an extension of the original agreement, the statement said. A Union Electric spokesman said his company had ended its part of the project because it had accomplished everything that could be done within the limits set for the AEC authorization.

3 RED SOLDIERS TRYING TO DESERT KILLED IN REICH

BERLIN, Oct. 6 (UP) — Three Soviet army deserters were shot and killed by Russian military police last week, 40 miles north of Berlin, the official United States high commission newspaper reported today.

The German-language Neue-Zeitung said members of a Soviet tank unit slated to return to Russia deserted with their weapons but were run down by a military police detachment in a woods near Finowfurt.

Meanwhile, the anti-Communist Fighting Group against Inhumanity said the chief of staff of the East German armed forces, former Wehrmacht Gen. Vincent Mueller, was fired from his post four weeks ago and has since vanished.

The West German organization said such disappearance in the Communist orbit usually meant arrest.

It said Heinz Hoffman, commanding general of the paramilitary peoples police, has been appointed commander-in-chief of the army, navy and air forces of Communist Germany.

FURTHER SHAKE-UP OF GOVERNMENT IN SOVIET GEORGIA

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP) — A further reshuffle was announced today in the government of the Soviet Republic of Georgia. The changes involved production of food and consumer goods.

A broadcast by Tbilisi (Tiflis) radio, heard here, said the Georgian Council of Ministers has released "Comrade Tsiklauri" as minister for food and light industry and "Comrade Alavidze" as first deputy minister of agriculture.

It also announced the appointment of "Comrades Butchenko and Khidze" as deputy and first deputy ministers of consumer goods industries.

Last month the republic replaced its minister of agriculture and split up its food and consumer goods administration, as the central government had done earlier.

That shuffle followed the ouster of Georgian Premier V. M. Bakradze and "Comrade Mirtskulava," first secretary of the republic's Communist party.

The continuing shake-up apparently indicates the Kremlin is giving special attention to Georgia, homeland of Joseph Stalin and purged Soviet Police Chief Lavrenty Beria.

'MATCH GUNS' SEIZED AT SCHOOL AS FIRE HAZARDS

About 12 clothespin "match guns" showed up in a search of boys' pockets at Berkeley High School today after Police Chief Jim Webber took action against the practice of shooting lighted kitchen matches.

Webber said he had received complaints that students on school buses were shooting the matches from the clothespin "guns" which ignited the match as it leaves the spring device.

"These are the most dangerous things I've ever seen," said Webber, who ordered Patrolman Edward Bray to supervise a search at the school in co-operation with teachers. Youngsters were taken into the principal's office and asked to empty their pockets.

Parents should be warned these so-called toys could cause death, injury or property damage," the police chief said. "If the practice can't be stopped otherwise I'm going to request a city ordinance be passed against them."

'Good Fellow' Who Always Picked Up the Check Held for Embezzlement.

FLOMATON, Ala., Oct. 6 (AP) — A 61-year-old Flomaton banker was arrested yesterday on an embezzlement charge after discovery of shortages totaling more than $86,000.

Arrest of Thomas F. Rickert, executive vice president of the Escambia County Bank, was announced by H. O. Hawkins, Mobile Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Hawkins said an audit, still under way, showed shortages of $86,001, and that Rickert had admitted taking more than $50,000 in small amounts in the last 13 years.

The FBI officer said Rickert reported in a statement he spent some of the money in his role as a "jolly good fellow" and that he "always picked up the check on hunting and fishing trips."

Rickert admitted, Hawkins said, that he had a "modest investment in two house boats."

Rickert had been employed at the bank since 1937 and was active in civic affairs.

The Rickerts lived rather simply in a rented house and Rickert drove an inexpensive automobile. Rickert is married and has a 24-year-old son.

Hawkins quoted Rickert as saying he first began making unauthorized withdrawals in 1940.

"Over the years, he related that he had executed notes in fictitious names and addresses and placed them in bank records while withdrawing cash in the same amount," Hawkins said.

The FBI officer said Rickert advised FBI agents that a part of the money was used to take up loans the bank had made to customers who subsequently defaulted on their obligations.

Rickert was bound over to the federal grand jury. His bond was fixed at $5000.

PRESIDENT SUPPORTS RIGHTS OF REFUGEES

Favors 'Legal Status,' Full Opportunity for Those Who Flee Reds.

SALERNO, Italy, Oct. 6 (AP)—President Eisenhower says the United States favors "legal status in the free world" and full economic opportunities for all who flee from behind the Iron Curtain. His declaration was read yesterday to several hundred escapees at the Mercatello refugee camp near here by Mrs. Dorothy Houghton, assistant director of the United States Foreign Operations Agency, who is on an inspection tour of European escapee missions. In a heartening statement for those who risked their lives to escape through the closely-guarded frontiers of Iron Curtain countries, the President said: "I believe that the task of caring for the escapees should have the highest emphasis in the minds of all the free world, and I am happy that the United States has already done so much of this work. "I know that the American people consider their participation in this humanitarian effort—through gifts, from taxes, and by other means—is not just a material matter, but also a matter of the heart. "I also know that a real solution to this problem cannot come exclusively through the giving of material things. Eventually those who have fled to the free world must be given legal status in the free world—the right to work, the right to move, the right to co-operate, and a chance at personal economic security instead of charity. "It is the unswerving aim of the United States that the burden of arms, the fear of oppres-

Eisenhower Text Before Church Group: World Faces Choice Of Atomic Ruin or Co-operation

'This Horror of Death and Devastation Must Not Be. This Titanic Force Must Be Reduced to the Fruitful Service of Mankind.'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 6 (AP).

Following is the text of an address by President Eisenhower today to the Sixth National Assembly of the United Church Women, National Council Churches of Christ:

AT THE outset, I must express my appreciation of the honor I feel in speaking before this assemblage. An invitation to occupy this platform would confer distinction upon any man, for you are gathered here in high purpose, inspired by an unshakable faith in yourselves, your country and your God.

I can hardly hope by my words to further your purpose or deepen your three-fold faith.

That faith, immeasurable and imponderable, daily exemplified in millions of American families, is the prime strength of our nation. It is the very basis of our society. And it is the most heartening support for those whose obligation is to represent you in the conduct of national affairs.

Though I cannot enhance the spiritual wealth that is yours, perhaps I can, by identifying some of the circumstances of today that emphasize the value of this faith, encourage you to spread its influence into every human activity in every community across our land.

Of course, the cycle—or the Marxist, or the desperado of machines and numbers—will scoff that faith is no armor against artillery, that the spirit weakens fast before the blast of the bomb. But your husbands and brothers and fathers can testify that in the terrifying nakedness of the battlefield, the faith and the spirit of men are the keys to survival and victory.

Faith is evidently too simple a thing for some to recognize its paramount worth. Yet the present and the future demand men and women who are firm in their faith in our country and unswerving in their service to her. This is true in every basic unit of our political and social life—in the family, the community, the state, and the nation.

This audience peculiarly symbolizes the smallest and the most important of these units—the American family. We of America have always recognized that the soundness of our nation depends primarily upon the quality of our home and family life.

While our homes have witnessed scarcely any of the horrors of the battlefield that are so familiar to citizens of western Europe, we know that their unique physical security has almost totally disappeared before the long-range bomber and the destructive power of a single bomb.

Today we are face to face with the most extraordinary development of all time—the application of nuclear fission and nuclear fusion to the world's armaments. These discoveries in the field of science present in themselves no threat to man. Like other scientific developments, they are susceptible to good or evil use, depending upon the intent of the individual or group possessing them.

Russia Has Secrets. The mysteries of the atom are known to Russia. Russia's hostility to free government—and to the religious faith on which free government is built—is too well known to require recital here. It is enough for us to know that even before Russia had this awesome knowledge, she by force gained domination over 600,000,000 peoples of the earth and surrounded them with an Iron Curtain that is an effective obstacle to all intellectual, economic, and spiritual intercourse between the free world and the enslaved world. Of these two worlds, the one is compelled by its purpose of world domination, the other by its unbreakable will to preserve its freedom and security to devote the latest discoveries of science to increasing its stockpiles of destructive armaments.

Man's greatest scientific achievement, therefore, cannot yet be made exclusively to serve the advancement of man's welfare and happiness. Instead we are forced to concentrate on building such stores of armaments as can deter any attack against those who want to be free.

Men of faith everywhere must gain a broader understanding of these potentials, both destructive and constructive. With energy and courage to match any setback and defeat, you and I—every person of faith everywhere—must with persistence work towards that enlightenment of the world's peoples which alone can show us the way to lasting and full peace.

We must certainly make sure that all the world comprehends, in simplest terms, the paramount alternatives of our day. The first of these alternatives is a wasteful and devastating contest in the production of weapons of inconceivable power. The other alternative is a world ever advancing in peace and prosperity through the co-operative effort of its nations and peoples.

The choice that spells terror and death is symbolized by a mushroom cloud floating upward from the release of the mightiest natural power yet uncovered by those who search the physical universe. The energy that it typifies is, at this stage of human knowledge, the unharnessed blast. In its wake we see only sudden and mass destruction, erasure of cities, wis-

PEARSON Drouth Aid Fast In Texas, Slow For Missouri

$4,277,130 in Lone Star Relief So Far, $172,000 in Show Me State.

By DREW PEARSON (Copyright, 1953.)

WASHINGTON. FOR more than four months the sun has continued to shine with sickening monotony on the parched fields of southern Missouri and northern Arkansas. Their situation is similar to that in Texas and the Southwest generally.

Meanwhile, the Department of Agriculture has moved at snail's pace to dole out drouth relief to Missouri farmers. In Texas, Benson's boys have done somewhat better.

As of this writing, 99 Missouri farmers have received a total of $1740 apiece. In contrast, Texas farmers have received an average of about $13,000 apiece. A healthy $4,277,130 has gone to Texas, and 328 Texas farmers have been aided.

Another 153 Missouri farmers are still trying to get drouth loans. They are asking for only $220,100, while the 101 remaining unrelieved Texas farmers are asking for $1,280,695.

Thanks to an alert young New York Irishman, President Eisenhower's press relations have gone pretty well. Jim Hagerly, who got a lot of practice piloting the sometimes tempestuous Tom Dewey, has done a superb job for the new President, tried to wean him away from his original suspicion of newspapermen—a suspicion which he once expressed privately at his Commodore Hotel headquarters as follows:

"Every time I walk down the corridor past the press," he said, "I feel as if they had their foot out trying to trip me."

However, Hagerly's careful schooling and Ike's own self-control pretty well evaporated last week in a press conference as raucous as any in Truman's day. Some newspaper men compared it with Herbert Hoover's uneasy relations with the working press.

Last week's press conference, incidentally, was held after the longest lapse of time between presidential conferences in 21 years—two months and 10 days.

Not since Hoover's appointment, there has been such a long hiatus. This, however, was not why the working press gave Ike the raspberry last week. Nor was it caused by the fact that Attorney General Brownell had called four pro-Ike papers to his home—the New York Times, New York Herald Tribune, Chicago Daily News and Scripps-Howard chain—to leak the advance tip of Gov. Warren's day had.

It was the general atmosphere between Ike and the 200-odd working newsmen who faced him. It was an atmosphere of skepticism, of disbelief, an atmosphere which gave rise to the spontaneous roar of "ha-ha" when the President dismissed any idea of proposing a retail sales tax. It wasn't particularly polite for 200 newsmen to laugh at the President of the United States, but most of them knew what the Treasury had been working on, and, unfortunately, laugh they did.

No wonder the hackles of Ike's neck rose visibly. No wonder, even the stanchly pro-Eisenhower Scripps-Howard press described Ike's demeanor as that of the "military man, alternately curt and lofty, full of phrases that seem to say, 'Don't try that stuff on me, Buster.'"

We speak of sacrifice. If each of us would search our memory how often have we, as we urged economy upon government, local city or state, urged that something not be given to us. Don't build us a new post office, we don't need it. Ours is good enough. Build it for the other city. Don't give me free postage, make me pay for what it costs to carry the letter.

Effect Abroad. What I am trying to get at is that America's policies abroad, to be made exclusively to serve the reflection of the attitude and qualities displayed by our people. No individual, no group of individuals however brilliant, however eloquent, can possibly do any effective work in leading the world toward peace, unless back of them is the mightiest force yet developed on God's footstool. And that is the force of a united America. America determined to do a constructive and real job.

There is, therefore, a clear

Nixons Off for Far East

VICE PRESIDENT and MRS. RICHARD NIXON wave from ramp of plane as they leave Washington on first leg of Far Eastern tour.

JACKSON SAYS U.S. IS DOING BETTER IN THE COLD WAR

DAYTON, O., Oct. 6 (AP)—The Eisenhower Administration will seek next year to bring another 10,500,000 Americans into the social security system, Mrs. Ovetta Culp Hobby, Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said here last night.

Speaking at a United Hospital fund dinner, Jackson warned, however, that the position might change at any moment.

It took just 70 hours between the ghastly Communist victory in Iran and a complete reversal of that picture," he said. "The June riots in East Germany changed the security picture of the satellite regimes in just 24 hours. A very good situation in Berlin may be impaired by the sudden death of Mayor Reuter."

"The combination of Iran, the German elections, the satellite riots, the Spanish bases and—hopefully—peaceful development of the Korean truce, and certain spectacular defections

Nixon Starts On 38,000-Mile Far East Tour

Carries Messages From Eisenhower to 18 Heads of Governments.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6 (AP).

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON completed the first leg of a 38,000-mile trip today as President Eisenhower's personal emissary to Far Eastern leaders.

Nixon got final instructions at the White House yesterday before starting on his 72-day journey. He arrived here from Washington this morning.

He said Eisenhower gave him not only general instructions, but both written and oral messages for the 18 heads of governments and other dignitaries with whom he is to confer on "all the great problems which confront the free nations."

Nixon's party of eight, including Mrs. Nixon, Brig. Gen. Paul H. Caraway, military aide, Philip H. Watts of the State Department and assistants, are traveling aboard a specially equipped Constellation. They leave tomorrow for Honolulu and continue to New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, India, Hong Kong, Formosa, Korea, Japan, the Philippines, Burma, Ceylon, India, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and Libya.

Senator Knowland (Rep.), California, who has just completed a world tour, accompanied Nixon to San Francisco to give him his observations.

Chief Justice Earl Warren concluded the busy day on which he took office by going to the airport to see the Vice President and his party off. He and Mrs. Warren shook hands with Nixon and wished him success, as did the Ambassadors from several of the countries he will visit.

On his arrival here, Nixon denied reports of a rift between him and Knowland over the role of the California Republican party.

Nixon stressed the fact that he will support Gov. Goodwin J. Knight for return to office in 1954. Knight moved up from lieutenant governor when Warren resigned to become chief justice.

But Nixon and Knowland both denied there was substance to political rumors that the shift was leading to a battle for party supremacy between Nixon-Knight and Knowland-Warren forces in the party.

East-West Trade Viewed Both As Mountain and Mole Hill

Report by Eisenhower and U.N. Bulletin Wind Up Deciding There Is Little Business Crossing Iron Curtain.

By EDWIN L. DALE JR.
New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.

If ever a political mountain was made out of an economic molehill, here and abroad, it is the subject of east-west trade. That is the emphasis of a report by the Eisenhower Administration to Congress.

The same conclusion is reached in a recent article in the quarterly bulletin of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

The E.C.E. wants trade. The Eisenhower Administration simply wants to justify what little trade exists against political and emotional opposition at home.

But starting from these different viewpoints, they reach the same conclusion: there is extraordinarily little trade, and not much opportunity for more.

And they both reach the conclusion, implied or stated, that public discussion of the subject is dominated by a set of "myths." The "myth" they find in America is that trade with Iron Curtain countries is large, that it is increasing the military potential of the Communist bloc, and that the best thing this nation could do would be to bludgeon our Allies into stopping it altogether.

The "myth" in Europe is that a golden opportunity for golden profits is being lost simply because of a silly idea in the United States about strategic trade with the Communist nations.

The facts about trade between our Allies in Europe and the Communist bloc are the matrix around which the attitudes of both the E.C.E. and the Eisenhower Administration are formed.

Trade between east and west last year was barely more than one-fourth as big as it was before World War I.

For most western European nations, trade with the European Russian bloc made up less than 5 per cent of their total trade. For the NATO nations as a whole (which leaves out West Germany and Austria) exports to the Soviet bloc last year were only 1.3 per cent of all their exports and totaled less than $500,000,000. This compares with 4.4 per cent and $1,269,700,000 as recently as 1947.

As for China, exports from the free world as a whole to China have been running this year at a rate of $375,000,000 a year, or less than 1 per cent of total exports.

And finally, the only nations

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Q. and A. on Taxes

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Several interesting questions were raised in your editorial of Oct. 1, "Still a Sales Tax." I take this opportunity to disagree with your answers, stated or implied, and submit more appropriate answers as follows:

Q. If it is a good idea for the Federal Government to refrain from taxing manufactured products at retail, why is it not an equally good idea to refrain from taxing manufactured products at all?

A. It would be vastly more expensive and complex to collect taxes from the 3,000,000 retail outlets than to collect similar taxes from the 300,000 outlets involved in a tax at the manufacturer's level.

Q. Is the Administration going to follow the National Association of Manufacturers in proposing a rate just sufficient to produce as much revenue as is now produced by selective excise taxes on particular products?

A. Not likely. In view of the present $3,600,000,000 deficit and the eight billion dollars soon to be lost as emergency taxes due next year.

Q. Or is the Administration going to propose a manufacturer's tax sufficient to raise more revenue than do the present excises?

A. Quite likely—same reason.

Q. Why is such a reform of the tax structure desirable?

A. If the United States confiscated every cent of individual income over $10,000 a year it would get only $3,500,000,000 in additional revenue. The same amount could be obtained by a tax at the manufacturer's level of slightly over 4 per cent.

As Slow as Ever?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
One would be led to believe that the new drive on traffic problems has improved the traffic situation in St. Louis. Come now, it still takes a Public Service bus 15 minutes to travel from Fourteenth street to Twelfth boulevard—just as it always has.

'Adlai Will Be the Fifth'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
"Democrat" in his letter of Sept. 21, states: "I believe there was only one man who was defeated in a presidential election and afterwards elected—Grover Cleveland."

Actually there have been four. The others were John Quincy Adams (1820 and 1824); Andrew Jackson (1824 and 1828); and William Henry Harrison (1836 and 1840).

Adlai Stevenson will be the fifth. One other point in "Democrat's" letter should be questioned—the association of Stevenson with "machine politicians" and "the boss-dominated convention."

The seasoned professional politicians did not start the Stevenson boom at Chicago—they jumped on a bandwagon started by the Independent Voters of Illinois, deadly enemies of political corruption.

Surely everything in Stevenson's record demonstrates that he has never been influenced by the people "Democrat" calls the bosses.

A Debt to the People

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The issue created by the controversy resulting in the resignation of Martin Durkin as Secretary of Labor transcends the question of amendment of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The real issue is whether or not there are forces, both within and without Government, that enjoy the right of veto over the President and a member of his Cabinet.

The President of the United States owes it to the people, as well as to maintain the integrity of his Administration, to flatly say just what his position was with respect to the 19 proposals to amend the Taft-Hartley Act. He further owes it to the American people to find out and tell them just how his proposed message reached the Wall Street Journal.

It may well be that President Eisenhower does not know what is going on within his Administration, but it is his business to find out and take such action against the "leakers" as will remove them from public office and restore the confidence of the people in the integrity of his Administration.

Osteopathy and Blue Cross

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In answer to "C.M.B.," whose letter "Cheap Medicine," appeared Oct. 1: Well, I am osteopathy-minded, and I for one am requesting a refund from the Blue Cross. I think it is osteopathy that is moving forward with its high standards and that both the medical profession and C.B.M. are narrow and pursue an arbitrary approach.

The Real Champs

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Ex-New Yorker J. H. Rahhal believes you were unfair in inferring that Carl Furillo "backed" into the batting championship. If the New Yorker will recall, Furillo was injured while behaving in a very unsportsmanlike manner—a man who is supposed to be a champion. Red Schoendienst and Stan Musial.

Mr. Rahhal also used the wrong tense in speaking of Stan Musial. Stan Musial is "king," not was, and "live" the king.

Public Power Choke-Off

The law giving public agencies and co-operatives first call on publicly-generated electric power is to be killed by the way it is administered. That is the prospect as the Administration's No. 1 power man, Assistant Interior Secretary Aandahl, is clarifying it.

Public agencies and co-ops will get first preference as new sources of production are brought in, but only until private utility companies preempt the rest under 20-year contracts. (Short-term contracts are made now.) After that, the public agencies and co-ops will have the preference in law, but the private companies will have it in fact.

As their 20-year contracts run out, the private companies can apply to have them renewed for another 20 years. Mr. Aandahl says whether or not the companies will be able to renew the contracts indefinitely is "a detail which hasn't been worked out as yet."

It is also a "detail" which, if worked out in the affirmative, will give private companies in perpetuity power produced by public funds, while public agencies which possess prior claim to it under the law can whistle for it.

The new policy is being applied first in the Missouri Valley region, because new hydro-electric generating plants are just coming into production here as the rule is promulgated. This non-preferential administration of the preference clause could do even more damage in the Missouri basin than in other parts of the nation. Since much of the region is subhumid and thinly populated, a fresh and resourceful approach to the utilization of electric power is needed to encourage types of industry that will be allied with agriculture. No such approach is likely if the supply is largely monopolized by private utilities.

The preference clause has been the law for nearly half a century. In Republican and Democratic administrations alike. An effort to repeal it would meet with strong opposition in Congress and among the millions of people who have a stake in keeping their public power supply sound and healthy. That is perhaps why repeal has not been tried.

Will nullification of the preference clause be any less political dynamite than repeal? We do not believe it will be. The 3,000,000 farm families that depend on it, the other millions served by municipal systems, the industries and business houses which rely upon public power sources, are too well informed for that.

If the Administration follows the course Mr. Aandahl has described, public agencies can have preference to public generation only as long as it takes private companies to get around to forcing them from it.

What would the public and co-op systems do from then on to meet the growing demands of their customers for power? They could accompany their customers in progress only so far and no farther. They would be reliable only if their available sources of power were sufficient. Since in a growing country a fixed amount of supply would not remain sufficient, they would depend for their livelihood on private companies, which could choke them off either by not serving them or by serving them at too high a price. The private companies, meanwhile, could meet growing demands, could be relied upon, could build their own generating plants in addition to drawing on publicly-financed sources as by private right.

Is this the Administration's conception of even-handedness? Is it good for the country to put a ceiling on the growth of areas served by public power systems? Is it desirable to undermine the efficiency and the solvency of distribution systems which groups of citizens in localities throughout the country have created by their own initiative and paid for with their own money?

The preference clause has benefited the people of the United States for a long time. It will continue to benefit them for a long time in the future if they will fight as hard to prevent its nullification as they would to prevent its repeal.

No Mere Municipal Problem

Mayor Tucker's projected 1800-mile tour of outstate Missouri ought to impress rural legislators with the seriousness of St. Louis's financial plight, and of the very real necessity for continuing the city earnings tax.

This will be the first time a St. Louis mayor has stumped the state for a city cause. He will be accompanied by former Mayor Kaufmann, a Republican, thus demonstrating the bipartisan nature of the city's appeal to its outstate neighbors. And he will carry with him pledges of support from an overwhelming majority of the city's own legislators.

But over and above these visible signs of the city's unity in its hour of need is the fact that a thriving, progressive St. Louis is an asset to the whole state. For one thing, the city pays far more into the State Treasury than it gets back. If the city's financial difficulties force it to towards decay, the whole state is bound to suffer.

The earnings tax represents the difference between progress and decay for the city. Unless extended by the Legislature in special session before April 1, it will expire and with it will go a major means of revitalizing Missouri's first city. Surely the outstate legislators will not turn a deaf ear to the Mayor when he visits them in their home counties. It is their problem, too.

The Sales Tax in 1932

As the conviction spreads that the Treasury department will ask Congress for a general sales tax at the manufacturing level, memory goes back to 1932, in the last days of the Hoover Administration, when another effort was made to establish this tax.

At that time the Democratic leadership of the House agreed with Administration tax experts to support the sales tax. The proposal met such a storm of popular opposition, however, that in the end it was defeated, 223 to 153. Only 45 Democrats and 108 Republicans voted for the sales tax in the showdown.

There was one very important difference between the sales tax proposal of 1932 and that which is so widely expected to be made in 1954. In 1932, the sales tax was suggested as only one phase of a general tax-increase program which included increases in the individual and corporation income taxes as well.

If such a tax is proposed in 1954, however, it will be in conjunction with a decrease in income taxes, for the present rate on individual income is to be reduced, and the excess profits tax on corporations eliminated, next January.

In 1932, the argument was made that a sales tax was necessary along with an increase in other taxes to balance the federal budget. In 1954, the imposition of a sales tax after permitting other taxes to go down would emphasize that the purpose is not so much to raise revenue as to change the method of raising revenue. If Congress would not buy the sales tax in 1932, it will have even less reason to do so in 1954.

A Bar Decision Postponed

The debate over the Bricker amendment to curtail the presidential treaty power has been going for so many months that an alert group of public-spirited citizens ought to have some idea of where it stands.

The St. Louis Bar Association, however, does not know where it stands, not even after hearing the issues debated by Jacob Lashly of St. Louis and Frank E. Holman of Seattle, both former presidents of the American Bar Association. The St. Louis lawyers shelved a motion of opposition to the amendment and appointed a committee for further study.

Well, we hope the further study enlightens the local bar enough to induce it to resist the strong pressure being put on lawyers all over the country to get behind the Bricker movement. Certainly the debate Monday night showed clearly what the alignment is.

On the side of those who would cramp the treaty power as it has operated under the Constitution for 150 years, there are gross appeals to emotion, the incitation of vague alarms, an all too obvious hostility to the United Nations and a strong positive role for the United States in world affairs.

On the side of those who oppose the Bricker amendment there is an appeal to reason, a sturdy faith in the good sense of the American people, their President and their Senators, a sense of confidence that this nation is mature enough to play its role in the world without hobbling the authority of its Chief Executive—an authority already powerfully checked by the Senate's ratification power and by the general powers of Congress.

As Mr. Lashly ably stated it, "It is beyond belief that the one great country upon which the fate of the world surely depends should propose to disparage or shackle the movements of its own leaders at such a time as this."

Too Phyll of Chlorophyll

The buying public seems to have got its phyll of chlorophyll, at least in some of the more exotic applications. The Wall Street Journal reports that of 200 to 300 chlorophyll-containing products marketed last year, only 80 or fewer remain, while production, which shot up from 2000 pounds in 1951 to 100,000 pounds in 1952, has now shot down again to 40,000 pounds. What can be the reasons?

Apparently chlorophyll has been used too little, and then again it has been used too much. It has been used in too small quantities to do any good against odors—less than 1 per cent in some dentifrices and one and a half pounds to the ton in some dog foods. It has been used in so many diverse products that giggling broke out among the prospective customers: Reducing pills and mothballs, candies and shampoos, sport shirts, pipe tobacco, cigarettes, toilet paper, inner shoe soles and popcorn.

Whether chlorophyll is a green bull or a green bear in the market place, it still enjoys an undiminished popularity with the most sagacious of its consumers, Mother Nature. Chewing gum may come and reducing pills may go, but chlorophyll runs on forever. Unperturbed and imperturbable, it is to be found today doing business as usual at the same old stand, making the grass green.

The Future of UNICEF

The United Nations General Assembly is considering this week what is to be the future of UNICEF. The letters mean "United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund," and the question is whether this activity of the organization, originally set up to meet postwar emergencies, shall be extended.

It would be hard to put your finger on a worthier U.N. function. Every day more than 70,000 additional children the world over receive some benefit from its expanding work. Every day children in Asia, Latin America, Africa and the Eastern Mediterranean are made safer against tuberculosis, against malaria, against yaws. Every day children somewhere are protected by better nutrition from the "hunger sickness" that afflicts all too many.

UNICEF operates on the matching principle. For every dollar of aid it grants, the benefited government must spend at least that much.

As the emergency which UNICEF was established to meet has not ended, it does not make sense that UNICEF should end. It is gratifying that the United States delegation has announced that it will vote to put the children's fund on a permanent basis, and that this view seems to represent the consensus among U.N. leaders.

It Cost $100,000

Brig. Gen. Patrick A. Hurley, who was Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, has made three spirited attempts to get himself elected to the Senate as a Republican from New Mexico. Each time he has tried harder than before and when the 1952 returns showed him again defeated by Democratic Senator Dennis Chavez, Gen. Hurley decided to do something about it. He contended that he had been beaten out through wholesale frauds in balloting and counting. He demanded that Senator Chavez be unseated in his favor.

Taking the fervent protest seriously, the Senate Elections Committee constituted a subcommittee consisting of Senator Barrett of Wyoming, chairman, and Senator Potter of Michigan, Republicans, and Senator Hennings of Missouri, Democrat. With $112,500 in two appropriations, they set up an investigating staff of 60 persons and spent a great deal of time in painstaking checking on the New Mexico returns. Since the Senate was narrowly divided but Republican controlled, Gen. Hurley pictured himself as probably casting crucial votes before the 1953 session ended.

The subcommittee has now ended its work. Chairman Barrett has not yet officially announced the findings, but Senator Hennings says that, in his opinion, "no fraud chargeable to Senator Chavez, his managers or anyone connected with his campaign" was found. The New York Times says that "unofficial reports seeping back to Washington have indicated that as the inquiry proceeded, Senator Chavez's margin of victory was widened rather than cut by the recount."

The full facts will come out sooner or later. Meantime a preliminary observation is in order. Election contests should be based on substantial complaints, not on surmise or speculation. If the advance reports are borne out by the official findings, the economy-bent Eighty-third Congress could have saved a cool $100,000 on the contest demanded by the defeated G.O.P. Senate nominee in New Mexico.

YESTERDAY'S PROMISES

Gen. Bradley Remembers Ernie Pyle

Hoosier journalist made some generals more human, including himself, speaker says at dedication of tablet at Indiana University; he brought the battlefield to America's hearthstones, and eased the load of separation; his typewriter "had a real soul."

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley in an Address at Bloomington, Ind., for Sigma Delta Chi Observance of National Newspaper Week

Through his eloquent writing, Ernie Pyle managed to take the battlefield to the hearthstone of America, to bring the soldier into our hearts.

Through his simple stories, he let the people back home know the troubles of the man at the front. This was his gift to those at home who wanted to share, and in doing it he made the load a little lighter for the fighting man and for his family.

He even made some of our generals more human—including me. For this I am truly grateful.

It is hard to imagine how difficult it is for a commander to know all his men. It is even more difficult for men—especially when there are 80,000 of them as there were in North Africa and Sicily—to know the man who has been selected to lead them, to send them against the enemy.

But Ernie Pyle helped us with the job. I remember when he first came to our command post to look me over. Gen. Eisenhower had sent him to us, sensing immediately that he could acquaint the Army and the people back home with their leader, a man named Omar Bradley.

A Bid to Trail Around

By the end of July 1943, our advance in Sicily had slowed as enemy resistance stiffened. Terry Allen's infantrymen drove through Nicosia and came to a halt as they ran up against the enemy's defensive line outside the hilltop town of Troina. Meanwhile, the Forty-fifth division on the north coast road found itself blocked by well-placed German defenses at the seaside village of San Stefano. The period of rapid movement had ended, for now we were solidly up against the enemy's co-ordinated defensive position.

It Corps had moved its C.P. into a scanty olive grove on the side of a hill northeast of Nicosia when my aid Chit Hansen came into my trailer one evening.

"I've been talking to Ernie Pyle," he said. "He'd like to trail around with you for a couple of days and do a column or two on you."

At the time I was still wary of newsmen. Thirty-two years in the peace-time Army had taught me to do my job, hold my tongue, and keep my name out of the papers.

Affair of the Helmet

"Why don't we get out of it if we can without getting Pyle mad? I'd feel better off without all that publicity."

"But General, try looking at it this way," Hansen said earnestly, "how many men do you have in the corps?"

"Oh—about 80,000."

"Well—now for those 80,000 troops you've got better than a quarter-million fathers, mothers, wives and sweethearts in the United States, all of them worrying about these men. A good many of them are probably asking themselves: What sort of a guy is this Omar Bradley? Is he good enough to take care of my man? They're the American people, General, and they've got a right to an answer. And believe me, Pyle is just the man to give them one."

I threw up my hands and laughed. "Put it that way and I can't turn you down. When does he want to begin?"

So I asked Ernie Pyle to ride around in the jeep with me for a couple of days. The first morning he appeared he was wearing that knitted stocking cap that went under the helmet liner—which was his trademark at the front. I guess I am the only man who ever effected any discipline with Ernie—I made him wear his steel helmet.

"Ernie," I said, "the soldiers in this Army have to wear their helmets for their own protection. If they do it, I have to do it. And if I have to do it, when you're with me you'll have to do it. Furthermore, it might come in handy before the day is over."

However, I noticed that the minute he left the area he snatched off the big steel helmet and replaced it with the knitted cap.

A Commander's New Eyes

It got to be a game with us. He was almost swallowed by his big steel helmet. It looked uncomfortable on him and it was uncomfortable. He never complained. But he never wore the helmet either except when I was around.

Riding around with Bradley was not without a certain amount of torment to him. Hal Boyle's daily greeting was: "There goes that social-climbing columnist!" Chris Cunningham predicted that soon Ernie would be making remarks like: "Well, I told Omar that his battle plan wouldn't work, but he insisted on trying it out anyhow." Jack Thompson accused him of being "seduced by the aristocracy."

But he stuck with me and took it all in stride, and he showed me our wonderful Army through new eyes—eyes that drank in every detail of the battle, from the biggest plan to the smallest machine-gunner in action.

From this man who, at the end of the day, would retell the things we had seen together, I better understood the feeling for battle and the feeling for these men that had always been the soldier's code of leadership.

Ernie Pyle's typewriter had a real soul, and it told our story to the world.

They Always Fought Better

As this memorial to this great Hoosier, a boy from an American farm and this great university, is dedicated today, I can't help thinking back to how he painted the great battles—Sicily—D-Day in Normandy—the Break-out—Paris captured.

No one could have been more pleased than I was when I heard that he was going with us on the Normandy invasion. I invited him to ride on the "Augusta" with the command ship, but he refused, preferring to go along on an LST with the troops.

Ernie Pyle worked with us to the German border. He always brought me more news than I could give him. Perhaps the greatest tribute I can pay to him is: "My men always fought better when Ernie was around."

Romance on the Riviera

THE COLORS OF THE DAY, by Romain Gary, translated from the French by Stephen Spender. (Simon & Schuster, 310 pp., $3.50.)

Most of this novel is a prolonged love affair, "passionate and bold," as advertised, but sometimes more passionate than plausible.

The setting is the French Riviera at carnival time. Jacques Rainier, 40-year-old hero of two wars, has just volunteered again. In 10 days he is to leave for the Orient to fight for the United Nations and for his "cause," a vague right to pursue happiness.

In a bar atmosphere of streamers and confetti he suddenly meets Ann Garanti, beautiful introverted wife of Hollywood's Willie Bauche. The liberal chapters shift from Ann to Willie and back to Ann, an Orson Wells type of production.

mind Ann's disappearance for a few days and even sanctions it up to a certain point. They have come to France to make films, however, and her continued absence becomes expensive as well as embarrassing.

Besides, Willie is a mythomaniac who has violent attacks of nerves and asthma when confronted by reality. He cannot face the fact that Ann does not love him.

But he has long expected such an affair, and through the contacts of a former Capone man, Willie had hired a deported gunman, Soprano, to shadow Ann. I told Omar that his battle plan wouldn't work, but he insisted on trying it out anyhow." Jack Thompson accused him of being "seduced by the aristocracy."

MARQUIS CHILDS

Taxes Tied to Incomes

WASHINGTON. In ruling out a national sales tax, President Eisenhower yielded to the inevitable. For weeks, Republicans up for re-election in '54 had been doing everything they could to discourage the Administration from even considering the idea of such a tax as one means of balancing the federal budget. They dread the kind of showdown that would compel them to choose between an unpopular tax and the leadership of President Eisenhower and his Cabinet.

Both the politician and the economist can make a strong case against the tax. Predicting that it would be thunderingly rejected in Congress if it was proposed by the Treasury, Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican of Wisconsin, went on to say that a levy collected by a manufacturer would have almost as many disadvantages.

Wiley.

The manufacturers' tax would avoid the pain and the cost of collection through 3,000,000 retail outlets. But, as Wiley pointed out, the tax at that level would be pyramided.

Ear to Grass Roots.

For example, if a manufacturer added a 5 per cent tax to an item costing $1, the price would then be $1.05. The distributor at his level would add, say, a 10 per cent markup not on $1, but on $1.05. The final price to the buyer would thus increase by considerably more than merely the original 5 per cent tax.

"Almost any retailer will tell you that his inventories are abnormally large," Wiley went on to tell his Wisconsin audience. "And have you looked at a farm equipment store recently? Have you noticed the huge amount of farm machinery piled up? How do you suppose farmers already squeezed by high costs will like a new 5 per cent tax on farm tractors?"

80 Per Cent by Income.

But when all the arguments have been arrayed to buttress the prejudice of most of us against a sales or manufacturers' tax, the fact remains that the base of the federal tax structure is decidedly out of balance. And the consequences of that imbalance, in view of the size of the federal debt, could be extremely serious in the event of even a mild recession.

William R. Biggs, vice president of the Bank of New York and chairman of the board of trustees of Brookings Institution, has done an analysis of the federal budget in relation to corporate profits in a business decline. He comes up with some striking figures, as follows:

"In the last 12 years the United States has built up a revenue system which depends to the extent of nearly 80 per cent of total receipts on corporate and individual income taxes.

"No government in the world, to our knowledge, raises such a large proportion of its budget from income taxes (personal and corporate) as the United States. In most countries, including members of the British Commonwealth, the percentage of the budget raised from income taxes (personal and corporate) is nearer 50 per cent than the 80 per cent in the United States.

Partner in Decline. "Because of this dependence on income taxes, revenues are especially difficult to predict. This is illustrated by the fact that the Truman Administration in January greatly overestimated receipts for the year ended June 30, 1953, and the Eisenhower Administration, two or three months later, again was too optimistic about them.

"A decline in business and in profits finds the Government a deeply involved partner, so that its tax receipts fade very rapidly. Thus it is that a relatively small decline in business of the 1949 type results in an estimated budget deficit of nearly 18 billion dollars while the 1953 type decline results in such a large shrinkage in revenues that the estimated deficit becomes nearly 30 billion dollars.

Biggs concludes that if the long term integrity of the dollar is to be maintained, the present top-heavy dependence for revenue on income taxes must be adjusted.

Desperate for Balance.

Vigorous opponents of sales and excise taxes may lump this with the propaganda flowing out in favor of a national excise tax. But it would be unjust to an authority who has given long and serious consideration to the difficult if not perilous position in which the Federal Government would be placed should revenues take a sudden togbog.

In his press conference discussion of taxes, the President refused to be pinned down on a manufacturers' excise tax. He talked about the need to reconsider and perhaps shift around the excise taxes now in effect. Opinion in the Treasury, from Secretary Humphrey on down, is opposed to any advance commitment to permit the excise levies expiring next April 1—bringing in from $800,000,000 to one billion dollars a year—to go off automatically. In the Treasury they are looking desperately for ways to balance the budget, and they see one door after another closed to them.

'KIND SIR' OPENS AMERICAN SEASON

Mountain of Talent Labors to Bring Forth Mouse of a Play.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

By MYLES STANDISH. It promised to be a gala evening at the American Theater last night. It was the start of another season, the opening of the theater's new home in the old Shubert on Grand boulevard, handsomely refurbished at a cost of $150,000. The play on view, "Kind Sir," had caused more advance excitement than any since "The King and I."

On the strength alone of its names, stars Mary Martin and Charles Boyer, its producer-director, Joshua Logan, and its author, Norman Krasna, it was sold out in advance for the week's run and had a $600,000 advance sale for its seven-month run on Broadway, to open next month. There was an air of pleasurable anticipation as the curtain rose.

But as the evening wore on—and "wore" was the exact word at times—it became evident that this mountain of talent had labored to bring forth a mouse of a play.

Mr. Krasna has proved himself adroit at simple, fast-action situation comedy in such things as "Dear Ruth" and "John Loves Mary." But here he seemed uncertain as to just what kind of a play he wanted to write. The first act seemed pitched on the key of a comedy of manners. Miss Martin as a famous actress meets a banker who is entering the State Department (Mr. Boyer), becomes his mistress, and finds he is very elusive about marriage.

But the playwright proved to be no S. N. Behrman. It was a remarkably thin act, rather bare as to both thought and action. Miss Martin's approach seemed rather tentative at first as if she had made up her mind as to what sort of person her actress was.

This is only the second week of the tryout tour, and Mr. Logan's direction has not yet in this act established the dynamics of pace and firmness of tone one expects of him. I mean the action lacked spontaneity, that at first there was a definite air of dialogue being read. Nor did the dialogue sparkle to any appreciable degree to decorate this skimpy frame with froth.

Groucho Marx was in the audience, and I venture to say Groucho could have taken the stage and ad libbed funnier remarks than were being made behind the footlights.

The second and last act was a considerable improvement as to action, but the tone ranged from the very serious to the artificial, depending almost wholly for development on farcical situations brought on by anger on the actress's part and jealousy on the banker's. Just as this trick gimmick seemed out of key, as if it belonged in an old French farce, so did the behavior of the two lovers, who we had been led to believe were persons of intelligence and maturity, come closer to the sophomoric.

In one moment we have an attempt at shock and poignancy, and in another Robert Ross as a confused and diffident tailor crawling around under a piano in amusing broad comedy style. I think the last was more successful than the first, and more successful than the unbecomingly cloying philosophy Mr. Boyer is made to expound as to his relations with women, or the author's attempts to make a brightly brittle creature of his actress by having her steal dialogue from her plays.

I won't go into details, as the program rather pretentiously makes an appeal not to reveal them, but my impression was that there was an awful lot of straining to milk all this out into a full play.

Mr. Boyer was able to hold up much of the interest with his celebrated charm and supple style, but charm, even his, can do just so much. The thickest butter doesn't disguise stale bread. Miss Martin, enhanced in the glitter of a fashion display of Mainbocher gowns, played her actress with more definition as the actress's sister, Frank Conroy as the sister's diplomat husband, and Ross all gave excellent performances as they got into the play. Margalo Gilmore completed the cast as a maid.

Jo Mielziner's set of a New York penthouse apartment was quite attractive.

Herndon Smith's Exhibition Is Warmly Received in Paris

Self-portrait at piano by WALLACE HERNDON SMITH.

By BARRETT MCGURN. The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special. PARIS, Oct. 6.—The dream of painters of every country—to have a one-man showing in Paris—has been realized here this week by a St. Louis artist, Wallace Herndon Smith.

In the Bernheim-Jeune gallery two blocks from the Champs Elysees and a few feet south of the Faubourg St. Honore, home of many of this city's most famous dress designers, 30 of Smith's paintings are on display. The exhibition will continue until Oct. 22.

Even before the exhibition formally opened the first purchase was made. The buyers were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Dean Jay, New York, who bought one titled, "La Veranda" ("Summer Porch"), one of the showing's gayest studies, the portrait of a young girl on a hammock.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay made the purchase at the preview showing Friday preceding the formal opening Saturday. Mrs. Jay is a former St. Louisian.

In a city accustomed to living with hundreds of great masterpieces many of which were created here, there have been no big crowds at the Smith exhibition. But some of Paris's experts of art already have visited the show and have passed their judgments. Stern comments have been mixed with warmly favorable remarks. Here are some of the foremost weeklies of the arts, literature and theater:

"His still lifes, portraits and landscapes reveal a palette of diverse and subtle color. Arts, one of Paris's foremost weeklies of the arts, literature and theater, has said: 'More freedom of conception and more daring in carrying out such ideas, however, would make this methodically sure painter a great artist.'"

Combat, a left of center Paris newspaper which has not always been enthusiastic about things American: "This American's paintings possess all the characteristics of a conscientious art-construction, solid composition, a true subject matter and delicate harmonies of grays and browns. The latter sometimes recall the work of Marquet."

"There is missing at the same time, however, the spark that would make these works life and personality."

Viewed by George Salles. One of the first visitors to the show was George Salles, head of all the national museums of France. He studied the pictures for half an hour, the view of Harbor Springs, Mich., the scenes on the Tiber in Rome and on the Arno in Florence, Italy, the self-portrait done at the piano, the blatantly American "Gare de Triage" ("Filling Station," under the original English title), and all the others.

The pictures were "intime" and "sensible," Salles said in French to fellow visitors. "Intime" is translated as "found," "sensible" as "sensitive."

The artist, Salles said as he indicated various scenes of France, has "caught the light of our French towns." Though somber colors often are used, a strange light seems to flow from the Smith canvases, the museum curator pointed out with appreciation.

CLOSED CIRCUIT TEST OF CHANNEL 9 SOON

Trial of Educational Station Expected Within Two Months.

Closed circuit testing by the new educational television station, Channel 9, may begin within two months, Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey told the Board of Education instruction committee yesterday.

Hickey said installation of an outlet on the closed circuit is planned at the board's Division of Audio-Visual Education, 1517 South Theresa avenue. Since the field of educational television is new, he said, it will be necessary to have a series of preliminary tests to work out details of programs to be telecast when the station goes on the air.

The closed circuit programs will not be seen on television receivers in the area, because they will be sent out by wire instead of telecast.

Richard J. Goggin, general manager of the station, said he was unable to predict when the station will begin operation because construction work has not progressed far enough. He said, however, that closed circuit tests can begin as soon as studios now being built on the Washington University campus are completed.

At present, he said, two series of programs have been outlined in detail. One is a science series for the sixth to eighth grade levels, and one an art series. Station personnel and school representatives are working closely on both projects, he said.

The first performance of each program will be recorded by kinescope, Goggin said, so that it can be rebroadcast several times later to provide flexibility for schoolroom use. Many of the programs will be a part of classroom instruction in schools throughout the area.

Hickey told the committee that at present he feels at least one television receiver will be needed on each floor of each school. It is expected that most, if not all, of the sets will be donated by school patrons' groups in much the same manner as motion picture projectors have been provided in the past, he said.

If this is not done, he emphasized, it will be necessary for the board to buy the sets. He said no estimate of the number of sets needed or the probable cost has been compiled, but that several manufacturers have indicated a reduced price might be arranged on volume purchases.

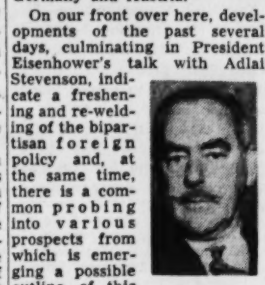

The committee decided, at the suggestion of Hickey, to recommend that the Board of Education authorize the hiring of new teachers up to the age of 45 years. The present board policy is to hire only teachers 35 years or younger, but Hickey said the teacher shortage is so acute that this is not feasible at present. Average age of teachers in elementary schools now is 41, he said, and in high schools, 55.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Rift in the Cold War Clouds

WASHINGTON. WE may now be seeing an opening in the chill clouds that hover above the battlefields of the cold war. At least there are encouraging signs, despite Russia's filibuster against the Korean peace conference and against a conference on Germany and Austria.

Acheson.

On our front over here, developments of the past several days, culminating in President Eisenhower's talk with Adlai Stevenson, indicate a freshening and re-welding of the bipartisan coalition for a foreign policy and, at the same time, there is a common probing into various prospects from which is emerging a possible outline of this sort:

1. A willingness to negotiate with Russia, provided always, of course, that she give some real evidence of good faith, at long last.

An Emerging Pattern.

2. As an earnest of our good intent, the projection of a non-aggression pact to guarantee us and Western Europe from Russia and Russia from the West. This would at the same time, as Mr. Stevenson sees it, challenge the sincerity of Russia's protestations of peaceful aims in the eyes of the world.

3. Taking up once again, if a solid footing can be established between Russia and the West, of the overwhelming issue embodied in the A and H-bombs in the effort to formulate an international agreement for outlaw of those weapons and general disarmament.

As Secretary of State Dulles said to the United Nations recently, "there is no problem that compares with the central, universal problem of saving the human race from extinction."

Called an Appeaser.

Since Russia's hydrogen explosion, in fact, the design for a blueprint of positive action has been piecing itself together, or so it seems at least on backward glance. This has come from a series of declarations of top leaders in both of our political parties, some of which were overlooked or underplayed at the time.

Those who have spoken out include Secretary Dulles and, on behalf of the Democrats, Mr. Stevenson, former President Truman and former Secretary of State Dean Acheson. Though too much significance might be read into their words, a common impulse that is heartening runs through them.

It began with Adlai Stevenson's report in Chicago on his world tour in mid-September. There, among other things, he urged the necessity of exploring all possibilities of settlement between the West and Russia by negotiation and conference, and of setting our sights high once again to resume the initiative in "re-exploring the possibilities of disarmament," and then this suggestion that got very little attention then: "We must think afresh; and, I believe, in terms of a European system of durable assurance of non-aggression—for Russia as well as for France, for Germany and the rest of us."

It was for that, chiefly, it appeared, that he was called "appeaser" by Senator Ferguson (Rep.), Michigan, and "soft on Communism" by all people, Gov. Dewey of New York. Only a few days later, before the U.N., Secretary Dulles said something that was almost entirely overlooked, to wit: "The Russian people, like the French people, have not forgotten what their nation suffered from Hitlerite Germany during the Second World War. They expect, and they are entitled to, assurances against a repetition of such events."

Trouble From G.O.P. Thus Secretary Dulles put forth the non-aggression pact idea which finally caught the headlines, belatedly, last week when President Eisenhower told Adlai Stevenson that it was being considered by the Administration along with all other proposals. Did the President regard that as "appeasement"? No, he did not, said the 1952 Democratic presidential candidate.

By inference the President thus disassociated himself from the partisan criticism of his opponent of last year. By the same token the President dramatized, too, the difficulties that he and Secretary Dulles face from a hard core of his party in Congress that storms and sneers at any approach toward Russia and whips up fears about Communism to arouse the public, a chore in which Senator Joe McCarthy is an ever-ready helper.

Negotiation From Strength.

Dean Acheson suffered from that when he was Secretary of State and, in defense, took refuge in appearing gestures toward that noisy bloc as, in fact, Mr. Dulles has done on occasion. It will, of course, be more of a nuisance with the approach of next year's elections.

In the last few days both former President Truman and former Secretary Acheson have stressed the desirability of negotiation. Each is wary of expecting too much in the way of results, though, hopeful. Both laid heavy emphasis on maintaining a strong defense and holding firm the coalition of the West against those who would disrupt it, the latter including not only Russia but some misguided persons in our midst of isolationist inclinations.

The former President and Mr. Acheson and the present Administration agree that negotiation must be from strength.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR ROBERT W. DITTMANN

Private funeral services for Robert William Dittmann, former shoe manufacturer, were held today at Valhalla Chapel, 7800 St. Charles road, St. Louis county. Burial was in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Dittmann, 71 years old, died of infirmities Sunday at his home, 7027 Waterman avenue, University City. He was born in St. Louis, and was president of the Geo. F. Dittmann Boot & Shoe Co., a pioneer shoe manufacturing concern here, for a number of years before the company was liquidated in 1924. For a time prior to his retirement in 1944, he was vice president and treasurer of the Brookhead Motor Co., East St. Louis.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Estelle Blumhardt Dittmann; two daughters, Mrs. John V. Betz and Mrs. Milton Mill, both of St. Louis, and a son, William H. Dittmann, of Alton.

SOME TOP HORSES AT RECENT SHOW HERE TO BE IN AUCTION

Several of the top horses which competed in the recent St. Louis National Horse Show will be among the 225 horses listed for sale at the annual St. Louis Fall Saddle Horse Sale, it was announced today.

The sale will be held at Missouri Stables Arena, 5200 Bearlodge avenue, for three days, beginning Thursday night. In addition, afternoon sessions will be held on Friday and Saturday, and a morning sale on Sunday.

APPOINTED HEAD OF CHEST'S RAIL BROTHERHOOD GROUP

Neal J. Capaldo, general chairman of the American Railway Supervisors Association, was appointed chairman of the Railroad Brotherhoods Advisory Committee for the 1954 Community Chest Campaign at a dinner at Medart's Restaurant, Clayton road and Skinker boulevard, last night.

Robert E. Stringer, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, was appointed vice chairman of the railroad committee for the campaign. In accepting the appointment Capaldo said he hoped members of the railroad unions here would contribute more than $200,000 this year, compared with $103,171 last year.

Appointment of Capaldo and Stringer completes the labor union group for this year's campaign. Arthur Hunn, secretary of the Painters District Council, is chairman of the AFL group, and Lem Munger, financial secretary of Local 231 of the United Auto Workers, is chairman of the CIO committee.

URGES PROPER USE OF TV IN EDUCATION

Father Reinert Warns of Substituting It for First-Hand Experience.

A warning against overemphasizing on the "filling station" method of learning inherent in educational television was given here yesterday by the Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert, S.J., president of St. Louis University.

Speaking at a closing session of the National Conference of Catholic Charities at Hotel Statler, he emphasized that personal activity still is basic to education and television should be used as a stimulus, not as a substitute, for first-hand experience.

Television is the greatest audio-visual technique of education now in the hands of man, Father Reinert declared. He cited several areas in which television can operate for the development of people and their communities, as follows:

Its unique potential for providing knowledge of the resources of a community—economic, social, cultural and governmental.

Its contribution to solution of civic problems such as racial tension, juvenile delinquency and housing.

Its ability to greatly expand understanding beyond community limits and combat the "dangers of provincialism and isolationism."

Channel 9 Plan Praised.

Richard Goggin, general manager of Channel 9, praised St. Louis as having the "best overall educational television plan in organization and relation to the community at large." To implement this plan, he said, the station will start operations on a small scale, "maybe only two hours a day because we want quality—not the meat grinder approach just for the sake of filling air time."

Joseph P. Glaser of Detroit, Mich., was re-elected president of the National Conference of Catholic Charities for 1953-54.

Other officers: First vice president, the Very Rev. Msgr. Joseph G. Findlan of Pittsburgh; vice presidents, the Rev. Fred Digby of New Orleans; the Rev. Louis-Philippe Latulippe of Montreal; Sister Mary Charles R.S.M. of Omaha, Neb., and the Rev. Joseph P. Springob of Milwaukee.

Msgr. John O'Grady of Washington was re-elected secretary and Harry J. Kirk, also of Washington, was re-elected treasurer of the conference.

Elected directors were Msgr. Edmund J. Britt, Buffalo, N. Y.; George E. Heneghan, St. Louis; Miss Genevieve Ryan, New York City; Sister Mary Theodore O.S.F., Jefferson, Wis., and Msgr. Joseph C. Walen, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pittsburgh was chosen as the site of next year's convention.

Speaker From West Reich. Speaking at an earlier session yesterday, an official of the West German federal republic said that creation of a united Europe is the goal of many refugees from behind the Iron Curtain.

Werner G. Middelmann, the Bonn government's permanent secretary responsible for the resettlement of persons expelled by the Soviet-dominated East German regime, said that refugees have found to their bitter experience that national states alone are unable to protect the rights of individuals.

Thus, he said, "they are the strongest proponents" of a supra-national community of states. Middelmann spoke to a meeting on overseas welfare services held by the conference.

The recent decline in voting strength of the West German Refugee Party does not mean a decrease in the refugees' determination to work for European unity, he asserted. He said it simply meant the refugees were successfully being assimilated as citizens of West Germany.

These new citizens are carrying their political convictions along with them. Middelmann said and will strive to achieve not merely a unified Germany but also a federated Europe.

The Rev. Aloysius Wycislo, assistant director of war relief services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, said that in the last 10 years "American Catholics have shipped over $300,000,000 of relief to war sufferers all over the world."

GIRL DIES IN REFRIGERATOR; 14TH VICTIM IN U.S. IN YEAR

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., Oct. 6 (AP)—A 4-year-old girl suffocated in an abandoned refrigerator yesterday—the fourteenth victim of such a tragedy in the United States this year. Three more have died similarly in Canada.

Dead is Pamela Plishner, daughter of Mrs. Glen Bolt-house.

In Grand Haven Municipal Hospital is Lila Mae Carpenter, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carpenter. She was unconscious on her arrival at the hospital, but was revived.

Police said the girls, playing in the Carpenter yard, either locked themselves in the refrigerator or were locked in by two smaller playmates. Police estimated the two were in the box an hour.

SAFE CONTAINING $2900 CASH STOLEN FROM UNION OFFICE

A total of about $2900 cash was contained in a safe stolen Sunday night from the offices of the AFL Electrical Workers' Union, Local 1, 4249 Gibson avenue, it was announced yesterday after an examination of records. In addition, checks totaling $5000 were in the safe. Both cash and checks represented dues collections. Earlier estimates as to the amount of funds in the safe ranged up to $20,000. Theft of the safe was discovered by a janitor, who found basement door ajar.

ACCUSED ALDERMAN UPHELD IN OVERLAND

Impeachment Proceedings
End—Vote Is Along
Factional Lines.

Charles F. Hesser retained his seat on the Overland Board of Aldermen today, after an impeachment proceeding ended close to 1 a.m. in a vote along factional lines.

Four Aldermen voted to sustain impeachment. They were Frank Hoog, who had accused Hesser of selling a dog catcher's truck to the city while serving as chairman of a committee to buy dog-catching equipment; C. F. Weseman, O. V. Wintjen and Martin Jaeger. The four generally support Mayor Tom Jordan, who suspended Hesser July 27 and recommended his removal from the Board.

Supporting Hesser were Aldermen Millard Dunham, William Conner and Everett Lakey, who with Hesser constitute a "minority."

Mayor Jordan, who sat as judge on the court of impeachment, was not empowered to vote, because a majority did not support the move. Hesser could have been impeached by an adverse vote of a majority (five) and the mayor's vote, or by a vote of two-thirds (six) of the members.

Statements by Members.

The "court" announced its vote member by member after deliberating in Police Chief Brown Hallgrove's office in the Overland city hall, and most gave short statements after the vote to the remainder of an audience of 75 citizens who had assembled for the 8 p.m. hearing.

Lakey told the group that if Hesser was guilty, "others are just as guilty." Wintjen said he voted against Hesser because he was convinced a violation was proven, and "two wrongs do not make a right."

Hoog's charges were that Hesser, named to head the dog-catching equipment committee in April, bought the truck May 25 and recommended its purchase by the city June 8. Hesser's ownership of the truck did not become known until he produced the title July 13.

Hesser denied he intended to make a profit, but sold the truck to the city because of urgent need to get one as fast as possible to spray insecticides in the infantile paralysis season and to get the dog-catching program under way. He said he sustained a "book" loss of $109 and an actual loss of $64.

Hesser produced a seven-page answer to the charges, which alleged the truck sale violated state statutes prohibiting an official from selling supplies to the municipality he serves.

Rights of 3 on Panel Challenged.

His answer challenged the right of Hoog, Jaeger and the Mayor to sit on the impeachment panel for reasons of prejudice in the case and allegations that all had sold supplies to the city for business concerns in which they had an interest.

City Attorney Frank P. Motherway objected to the allegations, pointing out that various aldermen and other officials had sold supplies to the city until last October, when a legal opinion was adopted forbidding such transactions.

Motherway noted that Hesser's defense attorney, William Becker, was the author of that opinion, and wrote it at the request of Hesser and his group in a successful challenge of the awarding of an $80,000 sewer contract to Ed Ryder, then an alderman.

Motherway, in his summarizing argument, said the question was not whether Hesser acted for profit, but if he dealt with the city with intent, and voted for purchase of the truck.

Becker said: "There is no question in the mind of any person that back of these charges is the fact that this board has been split down the middle for a long time. . . . Acrimony and bad feeling have mounted meeting after meeting. . . . It is political spite, that and that alone." His remarks drew applause.

CHARGES CATERING TO BIG BUSINESS ON PUBLIC POWER

WILTON JUNCTION, Ia., Oct. 6 (UP)—Senator Wayne Morse (Ind.), Oregon, said here today that the Eisenhower Administration is catering to "big business" instead of "home folks" in its public power policy.

Morse was main speaker at the annual meeting of the Eastern Iowa Light and Power Cooperative, Iowa's largest rural electrical co-op, with 10,000 members.

He assailed the power development policy of Interior Secretary Douglas McKay, which he said emphasizes determination to give local interests a major share in power development. "Who are the local interests to be consulted?" asked Morse. "The local interests for which the Eisenhower-McKay Administration set up the Hell Canyon dam site is a Maine corporation." He said the corporation was the Idaho Power Co.

and compelling answer to the question in the hearts of all of us: How can we better fit ourselves to be worthy of freedom, to guard its virtues, to enjoy its bounty?

That answer is: By making each life, each home, each community more worthy of the trust it bears for all mankind.

This worthiness will come in the measure that we show ourselves truly convinced that the central facts of human life are human freedom, human rights, human obligations—all expressing that human dignity which is a reflection of man's divine origin and destiny.

A passion for these values—for their faithful practice and true expression in daily community life—should fill the heart of every one of us.

How incomparably beyond even the gold dreams of our forebears we could grow—in material wealth, in intellectual stature, in spiritual strength—if each citizen and every community matched the founders of this nation in fiery independence, confident optimism, sturdy self-reliance, and that appetite and capacity for difficulties which have always been plain marks in America.

With this spirit, each of you—like, indeed, every American citizen—can arouse your own community to renewed awareness of the promise of freedom.

With your neighbors, you can join in work that—even as it remakes your own town or hamlet—helps remake the world.

Faithful to Freedom.

For it is within your power to reach for—and to attain—that day when you and all your neighbors can proudly say:

"Here we are faithful to freedom."

"Here in this town, our public schools are staffed and equipped to train our children splendidly to be free and responsible citizens."

"Here our teachers, loyal citizens of their free country, enjoy true freedom of thought, untrammelled by political fashion or expediency."

"Here our libraries contain everything that can add to man's enlightenment and understanding—respecting common decency but disdaining any other censorship."

"Here our ministers and Sunday school teachers command the respect that they so justly earn in teaching our sons and our daughters the love of God."

"Here our hospitals and our clinics give faithful care to all who are sick and cannot help themselves."

"Here our people—all our people—have the chance to enjoy the arts, to learn, to become intimate friends with the heritage of freedom."

"Here we rely—not primarily upon government grant or political panacea—but upon our own wisdom and industry to bring us the good and comforting things of life.

"Here we know not the sight or smell of slums that stifle the spirit of men."

Honest, Just Government. "Here all of us work to make our processes of government the best, the most honest and the most just known to any men."

"Here we have welcomed with our hearts new citizens from distant lands, and here we thank them for the strength they have added to our own."

"Here there is true equality of opportunity for work, for education, for enjoyment of all freedoms—blessings—for we know that whatever we have and hold is the work and the treasure of men of all races and color and creeds."

"Here, in short, any free man can be proud to live."

Complaint by Women. Ladies, not so long ago I met with a small group. Their purpose was to complain to me about certain things in our public school system. And they directed some criticism at school teachers, on what these teachers thought, the policies, the philosophy they were teaching.

And I asked this group one question only—I said you recognize this teacher's great opportunity for influencing your child's future, for the planting of good thoughts, or bad thoughts, for the teaching of a sound philosophy or one that was based on falsity. Have you had that teacher in your home? Have you had her or him to dinner? Have you taken the trouble to find out for yourself what is the philosophy of these people to whom you are entrusting the most precious possession you have—your children?

Now I said many people have not, but if you join the ranks of the critics and say that these teachers are not doing a good job, then why haven't you done your part of the job. Brought them in, talked to them, to see whether you can either straighten them out or get ones of which you approve. What I am trying to bring home, my friends, is that as we have difficulties and defects in the body politic in the social order, we must never attempt before our own consciences to dodge our own responsibilities.

All that I say to you rests upon one truth which I firmly believe. I tried to speak it on the day last January when I took my oath of office as President of the United States. That truth is:

"Whatever America hopes to bring to pass in the world, must first come to pass in the heart of America."

I know no more plain or pure ideal to which we can pledge our lives.

I know of no other way we can prove worthy of freedom.

EAST-WEST TRADE EITHER MOUNTAIN OR MOLEHILL

in their sphere of power. This has meant less and less in the way of surplus goods for export to the free countries—which is the only way they can pay for imports from the free countries.

In a word, the Communist nations haven't much for sale.

Some fear has been expressed that as part of its new "economic offensive" (which seems to be gaining little ground in the commercial trade field), the Russians might suddenly start offering gold to lure away western goods. While this is a possibility, Eisenhower Administration experts privately express strong doubts that the Russians actually have much gold. One high official of the treasury says that "what gold they have—and it isn't a great deal—they've got to keep for their reserves."

Much ado, in short, appears to have been made about close to nothing.

LEWIS METALS STRIKERS TO VOTE ON NEW CONTRACT

About 1200 striking employees of Lewis Metals Corp., Monticello, Ill., will vote tonight on a proposed labor contract which, if approved, would end a strike that has kept the plant closed since June 1.

Joseph Verdu, international representative of Local 4294, CIO United Steel Workers, said the new contract called for an increase of 8 1/2 cents an hour and fringe benefits adding another 2 cents to the package. He said the union negotiating committee would recommend its acceptance. A previous offer had been rejected by the strikers.

The company was making bands for 105-mm. artillery shells and fabricating copper tubing when it was closed down. Wage rates at that time were $1.49 to $1.94 an hour.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—President Eisenhower will visit Mexico for about two hours Oct. 19 for a festival preceding the dedication later that same day of Falcon Dam on the Rio Grande near Laredo, Tex.

The festival will be in the plaza in front of the municipal palace in the town of Nuevo Cuernavaca. Eisenhower will be the guest of President Don Alfredo Ruiz Cortines of Mexico. Later that day Eisenhower will be host to the Mexican President at a luncheon near the site of the dam. Both Presidents will speak at the dedication and unveil commemorative plaques.

Eisenhower, who will climax a five-day trip to the Midwest and Southwest with his speech at the dam, will drive to Nuevo Cuernavaca the morning of Oct. 19 from the ranch of Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas, near McAllen, Tex. The President plans to arrive at the ranch the preceding Saturday night or Sunday and to remain there until he leaves for Mexico.

Next week will be one of heavy travelling for the President. Oct. 13 he will motor to Hershey, Pa., where the Republicans will combine a large fundraising rally with a celebration of the President's birthday, which is Oct. 14.

The President plans to return to Washington after the Hershey rally. After one day's rest he will be off on the trip by air to the Midwest and the Mexican border. The night of Oct. 15 he will deliver a major farm policy speech to the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City. Oct. 16 he will visit his home town of Abilene, Kan., but return to Kansas City that night to speak before the American Herford Association.

Oct. 17 he will fly to New Orleans to speak at the Louisiana Sesquicentennial Celebration. From there he will go to Texas.

DOMESTIC FLIGHT LOW COACH FARES EXTENDED BY CAB

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—An indefinite extension of coach services by airlines at fares no higher than those now in effect was granted yesterday by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The CAB said a review of such service, started experimentally in 1948, indicates "that such operations have been profitable and have contributed significantly to the growth in total air traffic while apparently causing little net diversion from other services."

The domestic coach fares had been scheduled to end Dec. 31. The coach fares are 4 to 4 1/2 cents a mile compared to 6 cents first class.

The CAB announcement said certain existing restrictions should apply to any extensions of coach services as well as to any new coach services.

It listed these as: (1) Limitation of hours of departure for off-peak (night) coaches; (2) A minimum seating density reasonably related to the safe carrying capacity of the aircraft for coach service not restricted as to hours of departure; (3) No free food service except for coffee or similar beverages.

WATCHMAN SEIZES TWO AFTER STORE IS RANSACKED

Two young men were arrested early today by a private watchman who identified them as the pair at whom he had fired a shot during a brief chase in which they out-distanced him, after he saw them leave a grocery at 3043 Franklin avenue.

The watchman, Robert Edwards, told police he was driving north in Cardinal avenue when he saw one of the men loitering in front of the grocery. Driving to an alley north of Franklin, he left his automobile and saw the second man jump from a side window of the store.

Both men, Negroes, ran south in Cardinal and eluded Edwards. Returning to his machine, Edwards searched the neighborhood and saw the two standing with a group of other youths. Both the young men denied any knowledge of a burglary at the store. Police reported the establishment had been broken into and a desk ransacked, but nothing was missing.

Rails and Some Oils Join Air Carriers in 1-Hour Sharp Setback, Volume Rise.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—The stock market was lower today at the close as the aircraft suffered under moderate selling pressure.

Dow-Jones industrial stock average declined 1.22 points, rail .82 of a point and utility .07.

Steel, Goodyear, Lockheed, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Illinois Central, Amerasia and Standard Oil (New Jersey).

Higher were General Motors, Chrysler, U.S. Gypsum and International Nickel.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey in a speech last night said that the administration would like to continue the present high corporate tax rates as well as the excise taxes that are scheduled to be lowered next year. Wall Street never did like high taxes.

There also were reports in Wall Street that the Government was slowing down payments for defense work in progress, a move which the Government's cash position.

DETROIT—Studebaker, which was a big factor in setting early-postwar auto styles, may now be setting the pattern for the next few years.

Its 1946 model, designed with lavish use of glass by Raymond Loewy, was the first completely redesigned postwar car. The South Bend, Ind., concern made no further major change until its current 1953's; with these it introduced low, rakish "Continental" styling. Also designed by Loewy, the new model cost $27 million to introduce, double the 1946 cost.

A top Detroit stylist, employed by a rival manufacturer, says that the current Studebaker will affect the future looks of more competitive makes than the industry would like to admit. Most from the industry

The '53 Studebaker is a '54 in style!

Studebaker's far-advanced Raymond Loewy design is out ahead now and it won't be outmoded a few months from now. No other '53 car can make that statement! Studebaker's outstanding styling received the famed Fashion Academy Award.

The '53 Studebaker is America's economy stand-out!

This strikingly original car is the ideal combination of low price—low gas consumption—low upkeep—high resale value. The Studebaker Champion—the Studebaker Commander V-8—the Studebaker Land Cruiser V-8—all made sensational gas mileage scores in this year's Mobilgas Run.

The '53 Studebaker is new insurance of safety!

Every Studebaker has huge expanses of glass to give you all-around big visibility. Studebaker's far advanced low-swung design assures road-hugging steadiness on turns and curves.

The '53 Studebaker leads in advanced engineering!

It's America's most superbly balanced car—designed free from unnecessary bulk and power-wasting excess weight. The Champion engine surges with zip and pep. The Commander has motoring's most thrillingly responsive V-8 engine.

The '53 Studebaker excels in quality workmanship!

Every car in the line, from the lowest priced Champion on up, reflects the painstaking care of Studebaker's father-and-son teams and thousands of other skilled craftsmen. You save substantially on upkeep, as a result.

The '53 Studebaker is sensationally low priced!

Studebaker sedans, coupes and hard-tops are all down to earth in price. Come in and go for a ride and you'll take one home. The 1953 Studebaker Champion pictured here is actually one of the lowest priced cars in America.

M'ARTHUR CHAIR SOLD TO AUSSIE IN HIS COMMAND

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch, Special Radio, Copyright, 1953.

BRISBANE, Australia, Oct. 6

A mystery that has intrigued this city for several weeks—"Who bought Gen. MacArthur's chair?"—is solved.

It was press-shy former corporal who fought under MacArthur in World War II in Australia's Seventh Division.

The armchair, a leather-covered object, was reported to have been used by the general in his wartime headquarters here. It was auctioned recently along with other furnishings from the now-closed American Consulate, which inherited the chair.

Barry Cooper, 32, bought it for $70.85—about $63.35 more than it was worth as a piece of furniture.

It seems that George B. Cooper, Barry's now-deceased Australian father, got itchy feet that took him adventuring to the United States in the 1890s. Later, says his son, Cooper joined the American Army and served in the Philippines in a company commanded by MacArthur.

"Since I also served under MacArthur," explains Barry, "I thought that having the chair would be a link between him, dad and myself."

EXTRA INNING

Baseball Weary, but
No Relief Is In Sight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. Baseball is a little weary of being dominated by the Yankees, but there isn't any relief in sight. Casey Stengel's New York Americans are world champions for the fifth straight year and there's no team likely to challenge them in their league next year.

Stengel has a few problems. He must find a shortstop and he must find some pitchers next year or surely the year after to take the load off the shoulders of Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds and Ed Lopat. The infield problem may be the most difficult. The Yankees have been trying to find somebody to take over.

However most baseball men are betting that the Yankees will solve that one. Stengel will take a returned Jerry Coleman and patch up the infield some way. Or one of the youngsters will suddenly arrive. Or the Yankees will reach out and buy a shortstop. Except for Rizzuto and the veteran pitchers, the Yankees are a young ball club. Woodling and Bauer have passed the 30-year mark, but haven't shown any signs of slowing up and Mickey Mantle, one of the series stars for all his striking out, hasn't yet celebrated his twenty-second birthday.

Gil McDougald and Billy Martin, infielders, and Yogi Berra, another star of the series, are young men.

It Looks Like It'll Be Same Story in N.L.

It probably will be the same story the National League. Milwaukee's Braves may give the Dodgers a little tougher run for the blue chips next year, but they'll have to be better to do that, and it's more than likely that both major league races will be runaways, with the Yankees and Dodgers meeting again next fall.

Brooklyn has one advantage over the Yankees. The club has a larger number of strong-armed young pitchers, like Jim Hughes, Clem Labine, Billy Loes, Bob Milliken and John Podres. Preacher Roe is the only important member of the Dodger staff who is well over the hill. The 1954 race should be a breeze for Charley Dressen, with the powerful Dodger attack and a pitching staff that promises to be the best in baseball.

Even after the Yankees have beaten the Dodgers for the fifth time in world series competition, many baseball men are inclined to side with Warren Giles when he says the Dodgers are a better ball club.

Stengel's men clinched their fifth straight world title by taking the sixth game, 4 to 3, a contest in which the world champions were careless in the runs. In the second inning, they threw away a run when Pitcher Whitey Ford failed to score from third on an outfield fly, on which the Dodgers were conceding a run. Ford was on third with the bases filled and one out when Yogi Berra sent a fly to Snider in fairly deep territory. Snider didn't try to cut off the run at the plate. He fired the ball to second base. But something happened to Ford. He started for the plate and then perhaps realized that he left the bag too soon. At any rate he was only half way home when Junior Gilliam, taking the Snider throw, fired the ball home to Campanella.

Ford then donated a run to the Dodgers in the sixth. With Jackie Robinson on second base and one out, Whitey forgot about the base runner, who stole third standing up, reaching the bag so easily that Berra didn't even bother to throw. An infield out followed, permitting Robinson to score.

However the run thrown away and the run donated merely helped to make the contest more of a thriller. And before the Dodgers finally moped to the clubhouse, with another lost cause, they had a final thrilling moment of happiness.

Manipulator Stengel Sends Reynolds to Hill.

STENGEL, the old manipulator, decided after seven innings that Ford had done a day's work and that he wanted an old pro on the firing line. So Chief Allie Reynolds stalked in from the bullpen to face the array of right-handed batters coming up in the eighth.

Reynolds got through the eighth without difficulty, but with one out in the ninth, Snider worked his string to three and two, fouled off several and finally walked. Carl Furillo also worked the string to three and two and then hit into the right field seats for a home run, tying the score.

There never was noisier demonstration at a ball game. The excitement at game's end was nothing like the pandemonium as the crowd, generously rooting for the Dodgers, shrieked happily.

But it wasn't long before the Yanks won. Reynolds blazed called three strikes past Billy Cox and Clem Labine, and then Labine walked Bauer, Mantle beat out an infield hit and Billy Martin joined Pepper Martin in the record book, driving in the winning run with his 12th hit of the series.

Stengel's wisdom, or his luck, made the Yankee manager a standout in the series. He made no mistakes, although his men pulled a few rocks. In fact it was a series of many blunders, as well as a record-breaking one in base hits and extra bases.

YANKS' PITCHING PROVED EDGE IN WORLD SERIES

FIFTH STRAIGHT VICTORY IN CLASSIC, A RECORD, AMONG CLUB'S GREATEST

By Bob Broeg

Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 — Down through the years since they first found the victory formula, the New York Yankees have had more moments of triumph than the hero of an old-fashioned cliff-hanging movie serial, but none was greater than today.

For the first time in baseball history, a ball club has won five consecutive championships and achieving this distinction on the golden anniversary of the World Series, the current Yankees added luster to their rich tradition by turning back the National League's most impressive challenger in the postwar period.

The Brooklyn Dodgers just upped and ran away and hid from the rest of the National League, which has gained the notion through recent all-star game successes and the arrival of a new batch of topflight talent that it's the No. 1 major circuit now.

Martin the Shining Hero. If the Yankees failed to break down that theory, completely, they certainly demonstrated again that they're the top team in any league by turning back the Dodgers in six games, one fewer than last year. The end came for Brooklyn in the cold game of late yesterday afternoon when Billy Martin, living up to a surname famous in World Series lore, bashed a ninth-inning base hit that drove in the run which gave the Bronx Bombers a 4-3 victory.

Among broad-backed Yankee stars of the past and even the present, Martin might look like a boy among men, but in the series just ended the battling former prize-fighter was the most productive hitter since Pepper Martin, the old Wild Horse of the Osage, went wild at bat and on the bases for the Cardinals against the Philadelphia Athletics in 1931.

The new Martin wasn't as dashing or as colorful as the old one, though he played with a fire that Pepper would appreciate. At 25, though, he was the steadiest ball player in the series, contributing day after day to the down-fall of the highly regarded Dodgers.

Except for severe official scoring on his first time at bat yesterday, Billy might have broken the record for base hits by one player in a series, but he did equal the total, matching the Wild Horse's 12 hits in 24 times at bat for a .500 average.

Moreover, the Yankee Martin became the first player to hit safely a dozen times in a six-game series, and he led players on both sides by driving in eight runs with an output that included a double, two triples and two homers.

Because Martin was not alone in clobbering the ball, however, the Dodgers and Yankees contrived to surpass previous World Series for base hits, home runs and total bases. And it was by holding their own with the Brooklyn sluggers on attack that the New York Americans beat back the Bums.

Ol' Casey Bests Dressen Again; Decisive Homers by Mantle

Casey Stengel, once regarded as a charming clown and champion of lost causes, would no doubt have given up his share of the spoils to have assured his distinctive position in late middle-age as the most successful, if not best, manager in World Series play. And in the opinion of most observers, wise Ol' Case outpointed in field direction the Dodgers' Charley Dressen. Mr. Dressen doesn't have Mr. Stengel's wealth because he hasn't hit so many oil wells in his time, but it's a good guess he would have relinquished his series share to have come out ahead in his second try.

A factor in the Yankee victory was that while Mickey Mantle enjoyed even less success hitting for average than either Robinson or Campanella, neither of whom was the expected scourge of Stengel's staff, the highly-publicized young outfielder hammered tremendous home runs that broke up two ball games.

Campanella did decide one game, too, hitting a tie-breaking eighth-inning homer that won Carl Erskine's 14-strikeout game, the 3-2 thriller of last Friday and the best-played contest of the series. But even without an injured hand that bothered him early, Campy would have had difficulty improving on the performance of his catching counterpart, Yogi Berra of the Yankees.

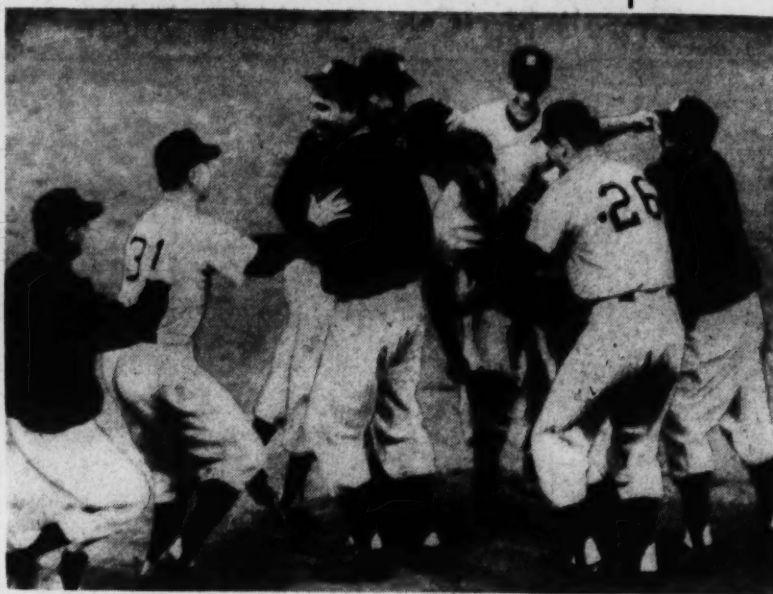

Berra, a one-time ugly duckling defensively, demonstrated his tremendous improvement as a catcher and was a troublesome hitter, batting .375 and driving in four runs. The Hill back home can be proud of him.

Furillo ties score in Vain. The Dodgers' attack lacked continuity, and it was only in the sixth and final game, for instance, that Carl Furillo, the National League batting champion who had failed numerous times with men on, wore his crown proudly. Then he almost sent the series to a seventh contest singlehandedly, belting a single, double and dramatic game-tying two-run homer in the ninth inning.

That smash came off aging Allie Reynolds, the eminent rally-stopper who slipped just enough to back into a tie with Red Ruffing, a former Yankee great, for having pitched the most World Series victories—seven.

Until Reynolds came on, Stengel's wisdom, or his luck, made the Yankee manager a standout in the series. He made no mistakes, although his men pulled a few rocks. In fact it was a series of many blunders, as well as a record-breaking one in base hits and extra bases.

Jubilant Yankees After Triumph

New York Second Baseman BILLY MARTIN has his cap knocked off as he is mobbed by fellow teammates after dramatic finish of the sixth and final World Series game at Yankee Stadium. Martin hit a single which drove in Rightfielder HANK BAUER to break a 3-3 tie and win the series in the last half of the ninth inning.

Mize Announces His Retirement

MONTREAL, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Montreal Royals can clinch the junior world series tomorrow with a victory over the Kansas City Blues.

Montreal took a stranglehold on the title by defeating the Blues 5-3 last night for a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven series. The fourth game of the series will be played at Kansas City with Ed Roebuck (15-14), a 22-year-old right-hander, named by Montreal's manager Walter Alston, to oppose Bob Ferris (9-5), the tall, lean right-hander for Harry Craft's Blues.

Missouri Loses Ritenour Star To Mississippi

Another St. Louis area athlete was lured to a Southern school after apparently being lined up to attend the University of Missouri this season, it has been learned. Bill Heimann, Ritenour high star who was named as center on the Post-Dispatch's All-District high school football team last fall, made a last-minute switch to the Mississippi University after Mississippi scouts saw him play in the Polio Bowl game at Charleston, Mo., on Aug. 14.

It had been announced by Missouri that Heimann had been awarded a scholarship by university authorities and had accepted. But when Coach Don Faurot's team opened practice in August, Heimann was not present. It was learned then that he had decided to attend Mississippi.

Heimann had been selected to play in the North-South game at Memphis in August, but a slight shoulder injury caused him to decline. He was a spectator at the game, however, after Mississippi officials furnished him with air transportation to Memphis.

Heimann saw action as a reserve center in Mississippi games against Chattanooga and Kentucky. Mississippi was reported to have offered the Ritenour youth a four-year scholarship, while Missouri's tuition-plus-expense plan was on a one-year basis. He would not have been eligible to play varsity ball as a freshman at Missouri, because of Big Seven conference regulations.

Remmert's 149 Wins in State Prep Golf Play

Jim Remmert of Mercy High won medalist honors with 149 in the annual State High School golf tournament at Forest Park yesterday. The team trophy went to Ronnie Ollis and Andy Squires of Springfield Senior High who had a combined 312 for the 36-hole medal play event.

Eighteen schools competed. Remmert, who had 76 the first round and 73 the second, beat out Ollis, who had 80-73-153. Squires shot 81-78-159.

Springfield's total was six strokes better than the second place Ladue High team posted. The St. Louis county school was led by Martin Lewis who had 79-79-158.

Bill Johnson of Webster Groves and Bob Goulet of Kansas City Rockhurst tied for third in medal play, each with 154. Johnson shot 79-75.

Behind Springfield and Ladue were Rockhurst (323), Kansas City Southwest (325), Normandy (329), Fulton (329), Webster Groves (337), St. Louis U. High (339), Kansas City Southwest (339) and Carthage (348).

Following them were Piedmont 350, Beaumont 351, Clayton 352, De Anzeis 352, Rolla 359, Hadley Tech 360, Jennings 373 and Kirkwood 381.

Eugene Coyle, Mountain Grove, St. Mary's and St. Louis Southwest withdrew from the tournament.

DuBourg, tied at the half by Laboure, 7-7, scored two touchdowns in the third quarter to win a nonleague high school football game last night at the Public Schools Stadium.

Joe Simon scored first for DuBourg, a five-yard plunge capping a 60-yard march. Then Tom Julius broke loose for a 25-yard end-around play to break the tie and later Clemm Nievoehner tallied on a 30-yard run for DuBourg's last score.

Ray Oakes ran 80 yards for Laboure's tally.

Field Day Set At Chaminade

Every boy in school will participate in some kind of athletic activity when Chaminade College High School holds its eighth annual field day and campus party, Oct. 13, it was announced yesterday by the Rev. Lawrence E. Jordan at a meeting of the Mothers' and Fathers' Clubs.

The program will start at 1:45 p.m. with an over-and-under relay. Ten minutes later there will be a short varsity football scrimmage. The last event will be a cap transfer relay at 4:55. After that a buffet lunch will be served in the school's dining hall.

John P. Wunderlich, president of the Fathers' Club, appointed Len J. Bray, chairman of the day's activities. He will be assisted by a committee composed of Lou Grone, Fred P. Rapp, Rocco Danna, Byrne Dimond, Joseph Catanzaro, Wilfrid Okenfus, V. S. Durbin, Joseph Richardson, Edward J. Sweeney and John E. Tegethoff.

High School Gridiron Notes

By John J. Archibald

Ed Gaus, who finally was forced to give up football at the University of Illinois because of several knee injuries, is now the B team coach at DeAndrieu High School. Gaus was an All-District back at St. Louis U. High several seasons ago, and was regarded as an outstanding prospect by Illinois until handicapped by injuries. He is now attending St. Louis University.

Last Friday's game with Maplewood was a far more pleasant experience for University City Halfback Bob Jordan than the game against the Leafs in 1952. Jordan suffered a broken leg in last year's game. This time he not only survived in good hope, but scored both of the Indians' touchdowns.

DeSoto is running up the scores. It defeated Wellston, 55 to 0, then last week walked Farmington, 72 to 0. Mad at somebody?

Eight teams in the St. Louis area have 3-0 records and five have won their first two contests. Those that have won three straight are Kirkwood, Southwest, Maplewood, Country Day, Brentwood, East St. Louis, Du Bourg and Wood River. The 2-0 clubs are Cathedral of Belleville, John Burroughs, Cahokia Commonfields, Vashon and Dupon.

Wood River is unscored upon. With Orville Yocum in his first year as coach of the Oilers, Wood River has blanked Laboure, 27-0, Edwardsville, 13-0, and Western Military Academy, 28-0. Many of the Wood River starters are juniors.

One football game official believes one of the reasons for an increase in the number of violations of the rule covering the use of hands on offense is the fact that prep players see the rule broken frequently by the professional players on television. One particular offensive violation is commonly overlooked by the officials at the pro games, he said.

Blue Wing Teal and Pintail Migrating on Big Scale Is Reported

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (UP)—Ducks Unlimited, the waterfowl conservation group, reported that southward migration on a large scale of pintail and blue-wing teal was observed in the southern portion of the three Canadian prairie provinces during the last half of September.

The group said mallards are gathering in smaller numbers than last year on larger water areas in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, that canvasbacks have reached a "new peak of abundance" in the area.

Canada geese have not been observed in large numbers in southern Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. But heavy snow has been reported in northern Manitoba and the geese are expected to begin moving south soon.

Earl Moeller, graduate of Normandy High and a student at Oklahoma A. & M. College, was selected the outstanding athlete in the area by the Ozark A.A.U. last night.

Moeller, winner of the National collegiate golf championship, will be nominated as a candidate for the James E. Sullivan award.

Jimmy Jackson, winner of the award a year ago, was among four picked with Moeller before the selection committee finally decided on Earl. Jackson was a member of the Walker Cup golf team.

Others considered were Arnold Bierman, 132-pound National A.A.U. finalist in the weight-lifting championship; Helen Hughes, third in the women's National A.A.U. long distance swimming championships and John Mars, speed skater, who holds the national indoor and outdoor titles in the midget division.

Lamar Ottsen was elected president of the organization. Lynn Steele was appointed first vice president; Joe Joseph, second vice president; Frank Krame, third vice president; Ernie Vornbrook, secretary; Fred Figures for First Quarter of Fiscal Year Reduce Threat of Hitting Debt Ceiling.

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Tax receipts in September were slightly less than expected, but expenditures were down as well, meaning it is more probable than ever that Congress will not be called into special session to increase the ceiling on the national debt.

The Treasury's final figures for September showed these results:

Receipts were $6,041,000,000 compared to $6,200,000,000 officially estimated in July.

Expenditures were $6,119,000,000, compared to the estimate of $6,400,000,000.

For the three months of the fiscal year to date, receipts were approximately $200,000,000 less than expected and expenditures almost $300,000,000 less than expected.

The Treasury has always conceded that it can "get by" until January without an increase in the ceiling, by reducing its cash balances, provided there is no unexpected falling off in receipts and no unexpected expenditures.

The Treasury expects to reduce its cash by five billion dollars between now and the end of the year, because of the current period of high expenditures and low receipts. It now has $6,500,000,000 on hand. It can still borrow approximately two billion dollars without piercing the ceiling of 275 billion dollars. Borrowing of that amount, together with expected issues of bonds to the Government's trust funds, would bring the debt almost exactly to the ceiling. Debt subject to ceiling is now $272,400,000,000.

Thus the Treasury should be able to finish the year with at least three billion dollars on hand.

Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said he thinks a working balance of six billion is needed to operate the Government properly, but the balance has been as low as three billion many times in the past.

One flaw in the picture is that the expenditure estimates apparently badly understated the amount needed this fall for farm price supports.

The Treasury has launched a new program designed to make it more attractive for private banks to make crop loans, with a guarantee by the Government. The Treasury expects that between $500,000,000 and one billion dollars of the loans will be taken up by private lenders.

The Government probably will have to take over most of these loans eventually, presumably a year from now at latest.

None of this eases the problem for the next fiscal year. Once again there will be the problem of uneven receipts, only this time the debt will have started from a higher level. Furthermore, there is agreement at the moment that the next budget can be balanced.

PAKISTAN OFFICIAL HOPEFUL OF ACCORD IN SUEZ TALKS

CAIRO, Oct. 6 (AP)—Pakistan Foreign Minister Sir Mohammad Zafarullah Khan struck an optimistic note today on the Anglo-Egyptian Suez talks, which yesterday were reported in the crisis stage.

Emerging from a conference with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Fawzi, the visiting Pakistani official told newspapermen the talks "have progressed in a way which I deem satisfactory for both sides." He added that in his opinion an agreement was "close enough to expect an announcement of an agreement soon."

Egyptian Deputy Premier Gamel Abdel Nasser cleared the British yesterday with evasive tactics in the negotiations.

U.S. SEEKS TO DEPORT EDITOR OF RUSSIAN PAPER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Department of Justice today announced entry of a deportation order against Boris Sklar, 69-year-old editor of the New York Russian-language newspaper "Rusky Golos," who is a Communist publication.

The order followed a hearing before a special immigration service inquiry officer and was based on a finding that the Russian-born Sklar was engaged in Communist party activities in this country. He was described by the department as a charter member of the party of the United States.

Sklar had lived in this country for permanent residence in 1913. He was taken into custody two weeks ago and is being held on Ellis Island without bail.

MAU MAU WOMEN STRANGLE WIFE OF KIKUYU GUARD

NAIROBI, Kenya, Oct. 6 (AP)—Women Mau Mau terrorists strangled the wife of a loyal Kikuyu guard last night while other Mau Mau hacked her four children to death, authorities in this British East African colony reported.

The raid in the Port Hall reserve claimed the lives of three loyal Kikuyu tribesmen, one woman and five children. The Mau Mau is made up mostly of Kikuyu tribesmen who have taken a blood oath to drive the white men out of Kenya. Last night's raid was the latest in a series of stepped-up activity by the Mau Mau.

Dick Haymes Says Tax Lien Deprives Him of Chance to Work

Asserts Attachment of Whole Salary Makes It Impossible to Carry Out Singing Engagement.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6 (AP)—Singer Dick Haymes says all he wants from the Federal Government "is a chance to work."

The Argentine-born vocalist has been having a series of difficulties with the United States, ranging from possible deportation to non-payment of taxes.

Haymes's current problem is a lien attached to his salary for non-payment of $96,000 in back income taxes. He is getting $7200 for his 10-day engagement here.

His press representative said Haymes had arranged with the local Internal Revenue office to pay the debt in installments of $2000 this week and $1000 a week from future earnings.

Joseph Mayer, head of the Philadelphia Internal Revenue office, said, however, "no deals are made here. The Internal Revenue office might have considered the proposal if Haymes were working here for the next seven or eight weeks."

In a statement issued through the press representative, Haymes said:

"I owe about $50,000—so I am told—in income taxes and I have enough work lined up this year to easily pay that off in large regular sums. If I just get the chance to work."

Haymes said under the proposed installment arrangement he "could keep working and pay off the debt."

But, the statement continued, "I cannot pay my expenses, or even travel to work if they take my whole salary. And how can I pay off any of this debt without working?"

Haymes failed to appear for his night club engagement last night. A spokesman for the club said Haymes called "and said his plane was grounded."

The singer has been commuting by chartered plane between Philadelphia and Greenwich, Conn., where his bride of less than two weeks, movie actress Rita Hayworth, is staying.

4 COAST STATES JOIN TWO MORE FIRMS GET AGAINST TIDE OIL SUIT OK FOR ATOMIC STUDY

California, Texas, Louisiana, and Florida to Fight Alabama Action.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 6 (UP)—California, Texas, Louisiana and Florida will join into a coalition to oppose Alabama in its attack on the constitutionality of the Submerged Lands Act which gives the oil-rich "littoral" states to the coastal states, the California Attorney General's office said today.

State Chief Deputy Attorney General William V. O'Connor said he and Attorney General Edmund Brown will fly to Washington for a conference Monday to discuss the Alabama case.

John Shepherd of Texas, Fred LeBlanc of Louisiana and Richard W. Ervin of Florida to map plans for the battle.

The Alabama suit in the United States Supreme Court contends that the impounded oil royalties should be distributed for the benefit of the people in all the states.

The suit also opposes recognition of a five-mile coastal boundary for Texas, Louisiana and Florida as compared with a three-mile limit for other states, contending such recognition violates the Constitution.

KILLS BOY, WOUNDS OFFICER, FLEES FROM POLICE STATION

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP)—A young auto thief, 17, was shot and killed an 11-year-old boy and wounded a policeman last night in escaping from a South Side police station.

The shooting started in the station as detectives questioned Carey Robinson, 19, and Leon Freeman, 15, Negroes, who had been arrested in a stolen car.

Police said Robinson whipped a pistol from his belt and fired one shot which struck Policeman James Quinlan.

Robinson ran down a corridor leading to the front door and fled from the station, firing two shots as he got outside. One of the bullets struck Daniel Decero, 11, in the head. The boy, who was on his way to a store, died shortly after arrival at a hospital. Quinlan, shot in the groin, is in serious condition.

It is believed the 40-year-old Rarick fell from the trestle while returning from a visit. His neck was broken and he had suffered internal injuries. The structure is about 30 feet high where he fell.

LISTS ALTERNATIVES ON FARM MARKETS

Grange Master Says Expansion of Trade or Continued Controls Lies Ahead.

The United States must expand its markets for farm commodities, or continue production controls, Herschel D. Newsom of Columbus, Ind., master of the National Grange, told the eighty-second annual meeting of the Illinois State Grange in East St. Louis last night.

"American agriculture has a tremendously large stake in the freest-possible movement of goods and services in world commerce," he told the 500 farmers attending the meeting at Broadview Hotel.

"Many areas of the world need our agricultural products and we need their markets. We must eliminate trade barriers where we can, and where we can't, we must perfect some sort of mechanism to effectively move the goods into the world market despite the barriers."

Asserting that a program of tariff concessions on the basis of export markets acquired must be developed—a keystone in the Grange program for 30 years—Newsom said:

"We are faced with two possibilities. We must either maintain and expand our markets, or submit to production controls. While now temporarily necessary for a few commodities, production controls are basically unworkable and unworkable in the long run. They lead eventually to a lower level of living for all. Such controls, he contended, result in greater acreage cutbacks, huge government holdings, bureaucratic entanglements, and the danger of vote-buying via the faucet of the federal treasury."

"With 80 per cent of the world's people underfed, there should be no such thing as 'surpluses,'" he said. "The markets are there. We must tap them."

"If we do not make it possible for foreign consumers to buy food from us, there is a strong likelihood that sizable portions of the billion people now hanging in the political balance will slip under the thumb of the Kremlin."

IOWA'S 'FORGOTTEN MAN' IS GIVEN A FULL PARDON

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 6 (UP)—Gov. William S. Beardsley signed a full pardon today for Ernest (Old) Lindquist, 63 years old, former "forgotten man" of the Iowa prison, in hopes of saving him from deportation.

Lindquist was paroled in April, 1952, after serving 42 years of a life term for killing a Carroll policeman in 1909—four years after he came to this country from Sweden. For years he received no mail in prison and became the "forgotten man."

After his parole, he married Mrs. Addie Jackson, 69, Indianola (Ia.) widow, who befriended him while he was in prison, and they took jobs in Omaha, Neb.

Then immigration officials at Omaha said Lindquist faced deportation under the McCarran Act because he was an alien convicted of two crimes. He was convicted of an Idaho burglary before being charged in Iowa.

There was no sign, however, that Lindquist's assignment to Guatemala represented any new policy step upon the part of the United States.

Perfurio will succeed another career officer, Rudolph E. Schoenfeld, who is awaiting a new assignment.

Perfurio, 48 years old, was Deputy Under Secretary of State in the Truman Administration. He has been with the State Department since 1938. In 1944 he was made executive officer of the Department's Office of Public Information and in 1946 deputy director of the Office of Public Affairs. In 1945 he headed the advance State Department staff which made arrangements for the United Nations conference on international organization.

U.S., BRITISH MARINES STORM GREEK SHORE IN MANEUVERS

IRACLITSA, Greece, Oct. 6 (AP)—American and British Marines today stormed two Greek beaches and trugged up steep rocky mountains in the final battle of NATO's Operation Welford.

Eleven waves of American landing craft hit one beachhead 30 miles from Communist Bulgaria's frontier. Behind the wave of Marines came landing craft carrying tanks and then more Marines.

Warplanes from the United States carriers Coral Sea and Franklin D. Roosevelt, lying in the north Aegean sea, roared overhead bombing and strafing the beaches and mountainsides.

$8600 IN GEMS, CASH STOLEN FROM UNIVERSITY CITY GIRL

Miss Gloria Applebaum, daughter of Dr. S. A. Applebaum, 8730 West Kingsbury boulevard, University City, reported to Philadelphia police the theft of $8000 in jewelry and $800 in cash Saturday.

She told police she discovered the loss when moving some personal effects from her automobile to a room in the dormitory of the University of Pennsylvania where she is a student. She said she had been gone only a short time when the theft occurred.

She reported a dinner ring valued at $5000 and the $600 in cash to pay for tuition and a two-year supply of clothing were among the articles stolen.

Young Mother Seeking Divorce So She Can Marry Preacher

'I Tried to Fight Being in Love' With Him, She Says — He Is Giving Up Wife, 3 Children, Church.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 6 (UP)—A young mother, whose love for a Baptist clergyman led her to leave his wife and children, said today she hoped the score left by her romance would heal.

Mrs. Kathryn Gadd, who has filed suit for divorce so she can marry the Rev. Charles D. Riley Jr., 30 years old, of Memphis, said she was friendly with the preacher's wife.

"I'm sorry this all happened," Mrs. Gadd said at her brother's home here. "I tried to fight being in love with Charles, but people are just human."

Riley, who is at La Crosse, Wis., with a friend, said he would leave the ministry to work as an insurance agent.

Didn't Tell Anybody.

He said that after he and Mrs. Gadd, one of his parishioners, fell in love "we didn't tell anybody and tried to go on as before because of the children."

About six weeks ago it began to cause home troubles for both of us, loving someone else as we did," he said. "We couldn't live with our own spouses any longer. So we decided to tell them we wanted a divorce."

Riley said he was giving up his three children and the Memphis church he has led for three years because of the love affair. But Mrs. Gadd said today that she didn't think she would have to give up her two young sons, "at least not completely."

She said she doubted if her husband, Buford, knows "what to do with them."

Riley said of Mrs. Gadd's husband, who was a deacon in his church, "Buford is a fine man."

They both characterized themselves as the victims of a difficult situation, which they had tried to struggle against. Not until they had hurt each other in a quarrel did they realize they loved each other, Riley said.

Riley said Mrs. Gadd came to him more than a year ago to tell him she loved him.

"Not in Love With Her Then," he said. "I was not in love with her then. I suggested that she and Buford move their membership to another church."

The Gadds moved to another community, and I thought everything was all right."

Then, last June, Riley said he and Mrs. Gadd had a spat and found themselves apologizing tenderly.

"We've known since then that we were really in love with each other," the preacher said.

Mrs. Gadd said she would not have both won their divorces. She said she was sure she could win at least part-time custody of her children from a divorce court.

PERURIO NAMED WAGNER DEMANDS ENVOY TO GUATEMALA WICKS IMPEACHMENT

Experienced Diplomat Sent to Nation Long Troubled by Reds.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP)—President Eisenhower yesterday selected John E. Perfurio, a career diplomat, to be Ambassador to Guatemala.

There was no indication that Perfurio, a Democrat, was being sent to the Communist-troubled Latin American country as a troubleshooter. Perfurio, a diplomat of considerable experience, was Ambassador to Greece until he was recalled recently for reassignment.

Guatemala, which supplies coffee and bananas to the United States, has been in the throes of political turmoil since the overthrow of dictator Ubico in 1944. The well-organized Communists have obtained control of the Labor, Confederation of Labor, the Government radio and newspapers and the social security system.

Assistant Secretary of State John M. Cabot said last week that the Communist Government represented a new and serious threat to the United States.

Perfurio will succeed another career officer, Rudolph E. Schoenfeld, who is awaiting a new assignment.

Perfurio, 48 years old, was Deputy Under Secretary of State in the Truman Administration. He has been with the State Department since 1938. In 1944 he was made executive officer of the Department's Office of Public Information and in 1946 deputy director of the Office of Public Affairs. In 1945 he headed the advance State Department staff which made arrangements for the United Nations conference on international organization.

NAMED NURSING CONSULTANT TO AID SCHOOLS IN THAILAND

Appointment of Miss Elizabeth C. McIntosh, director of nursing service and nursing education at St. Luke's Hospital, as consultant in nursing at Washington University was announced today.

Miss McIntosh, 8710 Florence avenue, Brentwood, will leave St. Louis tomorrow for Bangkok, Thailand, where she will serve for a year as consultant to the school of nursing at the University of Chulalongkorn and Siriraj Medical Schools, which Washington University has "adopted" under a co-operative program.

She served as an instructor in nursing at Washington University School of Nursing from 1943 to 1946 and prior to that was with the Methodist Church Mission in China for five years.

PLASTIC PACKAGING OF FOODS HAILED AT PRODUCE MEETING

Development of new plastic materials which preserve foods has been a key factor in the great success of prepackaging products for consumers, Fred H. Vahlsing, New York, said to be the biggest individual producer operator in the United States, said today.

More than 700 delegates to the third annual convention of the Produce Prepackaging Association at the Chase Hotel heard Vahlsing deliver the keynote speech.

C. W. Marvin, San Antonio, Tex., president of the association, said there are vast economic opportunities in the prepackaging field as a result of the rapid and growing acceptance by customers of prepackaged products.

BACH SOCIETY REPORTS 100 NEW MEMBERS IN DRIVE

More than 100 persons and industries have recently joined the Bach Society of St. Louis, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Walter C. Ploeser, chairman of the membership drive, said today that the drive was greatly encouraged by this good beginning.

The mail and personal solicitation will continue this month.

Individuals, church groups and other organizations who want the 150-voice Bach Festival Chorus to increase its musical activity requested the membership drive to increase membership to 2500. Current membership is about 1000.

HOSPITALS URGED TO TREAT BABIES AS HUMAN BEINGS

GENEVA, Oct. 6 (AP)—A group of nine World Health Organization experts who recently made a study of infant mortality found that in two countries, Sweden and The Netherlands, the death rate of baby deaths is extremely low despite differing practices.

In Sweden, 95 per cent of births take place in hospitals and in The Netherlands 80 per cent of the babies are born at home.

"The WHO experts were unanimous in recognizing that whether the economic, geographic or cultural factors favor one or the other method, every effort should be made to improve existing conditions," their report said. "The conditions prevailing in some hospitals must be humanized. Mothers and their babies must be treated not as numbers but as human beings."

The WHO report said the practice of delivering babies at home "has advantage of promoting to the maximum the establishment of harmonious relations between the newly born infant and its mother and the rest of the family."

SECOND-OLDEST PEACE SOCIETY TO MEET IN U.S.

Inter-Parliamentary Union Has Been Working for World Friendship Since 1899.

By JAMES M. HASWELL
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright, 1953.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—The second-oldest peace society in the world meets here this week.

When 350 delegates from 33 nations open the forty-second conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in the House of Representatives chamber Friday, President Eisenhower will welcome an organization which has been working for international friendship since 1899.

The World Court at The Hague is its best-known brainchild. But historians of the Inter-Parliamentary Union say it created the "climates" which produced the early Hague peace conferences, the plans for the League of Nations, and much of the framework of the United Nations.

The only older peace organization is the American Peace Society, founded in the 1830s. Dr. Franklin M. Dunham, of the United States Department of Education, is secretary both of the Peace Society and of the United States delegation to the Inter-Parliamentary Union. Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep., Michigan), heads the United States delegation. Viscount Stansgate of Britain is president this year.

The Inter-Parliamentary Union will be meeting in the United States for the first time in a quarter century.

Topics to be discussed. Chief topics of discussion will be the effect of United States Point IV programs and United Nations technical assistance programs on democratic institutions, such as parliaments.

A parallel familiar in American politics is the impact of federal aid programs on state legislatures, and the resulting struggle to direct the policies of state programs partly supported by congressional grants.

The delegates also will discuss the role of parliaments in the conduct of foreign affairs. The United States system of rigid separation of powers gives high visibility to congressional attempts to direct foreign policy. In other governments this distinction is not so clearly drawn, and the management of foreign policy often becomes a direct and proper concern of national legislatures.

Washington news frequently relates direct and indirect attempts by Senators and Representatives to tell the President how he ought to conduct foreign affairs, and to compel him to follow their wishes by controlling the presidential purse-strings.

Political Self-Determination. A third scheduled topic is the right of people to political self-determination, but this may turn into a pro forma debate.

Like the United Nations row over admitting Red China, the Inter-Parliamentary Union has trouble in recognizing the effect of revolutions.

Before World War II Poland was a member of the union, and the Communists now running the Polish government still pay the annual dues. But they are not invited to send delegations to the annual meetings.

Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia has been invited, however, and is sending a delegation to represent his government which is Communist in philosophy, but anti-Russian and pro-Western in its economic and political affiliations.

The strangest case is that of Spain. The member of the union for that country is the republican government which has been in exile since Gen. Franco won the Spanish civil war in the late 1930s.

BUILDS 'IMPOSSIBLE' MACHINE TO THREAD SCREWS FASTER

CLEVELAND, Oct. 6 (UP)—Here's one man who benefited from the depression, having a "doughhead" as a chief engineer, and a 100-year-old idea.

D. H. Prutton now happily recalls that odd combination which started him on the way nearly 20 years ago "when the bankers took over the factory I was working in and put up a 'doughhead' as chief engineer."

Prutton quit and went into business for himself and now operates the D. H. Prutton Machinery Co., which turns out machines for threading screws and bolts at least 10 times faster than any other type. A newer model "planetary thread roller" can thread hollow metal pieces 20 times faster than conventional equipment.

The father and his two sons, Edward, 20 years old, and Howard, 25, drew on a century-old idea of Edward Croft of Waterbury, Conn., who "thought of building a rotary machine like ours, but was ahead of his time," Prutton explained.

Not only did the Pruttons manage to build the "impossible" machine, but they operate their neat factory with 20 employees in an unorthodox fashion.

Beside a profit-sharing scheme, Prutton operates on a democratic basis. Whenever a problem arises, boss and workers meet. "We do what the majority decides is right," he said.

TAKES POSTMAN'S HOLIDAY

BURLINGTON, N.C., Oct. 6 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Bob Pruitt really believe in covering ground when they take a vacation. During a recent three-week trip they traveled 10,000 miles in 27 states. Pruitt did all the driving. His occupation is a truck driver.

THRONES FOR AUSTRALIA

AUCKLAND, New Zealand Oct. 6 (AP)—Two thrones are being built for Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh for the day the Queen opens a special session of the New Zealand Parliament in Wellington Jan. 12.

The thrones will be about the same size, although the designs will differ slightly. The throne for the duke will be on the same level, but will be placed a little behind that of Queen Elizabeth.

Fish Analysis

The Dean Speaks Up Long Arm of Coincidence

By Adele Starbird

As we drove to Camp Wyman in Eureka to spend the weekend with the freshman girls, I was surprised to see how rich the autumn coloring was—this was two weeks ago—"the sumptuous sadness of autumn." So the following Monday when I drove to Columbia, I expected to find a riot of color along Highway 40, but the leaves had not yet begun to turn. I wish somebody would explain what caused the difference.

Gratitude is a lovely thing and not quite so rare as the cynics pretend. The president of one of the sororities at the University of Missouri was speaking to me enthusiastically about their Director of Student Affairs for Women, Gladys Koepke. "When she stood on that platform and thanked us for our co-operation, it just brought a lump to my throat, because we ought to be thanking her for all that she has done for us!"

With these generous words the girl gave me a portrait of herself as well as one of Miss Koepke. MY MOTHER has given me a new clock-radio, so that I may set it at night and be awakened in the morning to the sound of music. Just like Montaigne!

When Michel de Montaigne was a little boy, his father would not permit him to be rudely awakened, feeling that such abruptness was bad for the nerves. He engaged musicians to play every morning outside the child's room. Now, four centuries later, one does not have to be the pampered child of a wealthy merchant in order to awaken to music. Chalk up one mark for gadgets.

HADDON CHAMBERS created the phrase, "the long arm of coincidence." The arm was incredibly long about two weeks ago when I was writing a column about the movie actress from Little Rock. It was late at night, and I had come to a full stop because I couldn't remember her name. By a little judicious telephoning I found that the friend who had told the story was visiting in California. I put in a call for her sister's house in California, and sat up until all hours, with no response.

I was rapidly approaching the deadline, and I felt like that theorem in geometry about a variable approaching a limit. "A deadline is where something dies, and you know what," says Christopher Morley.

"Why don't you write your columns in advance, and keep some in reserve for emergencies?" That editorial suggestion has been made to me more than once. It is a question I often ask myself.

THE NEXT MORNING when I walked into my office, a Mr. Morley—not Christopher this time—was waiting to talk to me about entering his daughter Julianna in the university. He was from Little Rock. At the end of our conversation, he said, "You have answered all my questions. Do you want to ask me anything?"

"Oh, yes, I do, Mr. Morley. What is the name of the actress from Little Rock, the one who has such perfect legs?"

If he was surprised, he didn't show it. "I remember seeing her pictures in the paper at the time of her visit, but I don't recall the name. Are you going to be in your office all morning? Good, you will hear from me."

Sometime later Little Rock called and a pretty Southern voice said that the name of the actress was Bette May Adams, and her stage name was Julie Adams, and that she, Julianna, had been instructed by her father to call me right away.

The long arm of coincidence had rescued me.

Half Hermits

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

WHAT'S the matter with husbands who shun social contacts in their homes, never want visitors, yet are popular and gregarious in their business circles? Literally thousands of wives have this problem and a great many bring it to me.

Certainly, in some cases, there is something wrong with such a man—but there also could be something wrong with his wife, or even with his home. At any rate, wives of half-hermit husbands need to find out the cause and then seek the remedy. Among these wives is Mrs. R. into whose home this type of problem has crept to take some of the satisfaction out of an otherwise happy married life.

HERE IS her story:

"What can you do with a man who will not associate with people after working hours? My husband is a successful and popular business man—I don't believe he has an enemy in the world. But so far as our family life goes, he doesn't seem to have a friend in the world, and he doesn't want any."

"We do go places together, but always alone, never with other couples. He's not the kind of man who enjoys a picnic in the park with neighbors or old acquaintances. Just to give you an illustration of what I'm up against: If I invite friends to the house and he finds it out before they arrive, he disappears! Even if someone stops in for an unexpected visit, he'll make an excuse that he has to go back to his shop for something he forgot."

"In the old days we had plenty of callers, but they have gradually dropped out of our life. Don't tell me to be patient in the hope that he'll change as he grows older. He's changing all the time—for the worse."

"I give frequent afternoon teas for women friends, and go to luncheons with them, but on Sundays and holidays my husband and I are alone together—and it looks as if we always will be. Is this a reasonable marriage, Dr. Popenoe?"

NOT ALTOGETHER, Mrs. R. and you'll have to do some hard thinking to find out the remedy. Since it appears that he is popular among his business acquaintances, I wonder if you haven't tried too hard to push him into a form of social life that doesn't interest him? Maybe the friends you invite are always your friends, not his friends, and he is merely bored or irritated by them. Many a wife makes a mistake by trying to drag her husband into an artificial social life that he finds distasteful, instead of trying to build up, in consultation with him, a normal social life that represents the interests of both.

Maybe you don't care much for the associates that he enjoys in the business world or in his fraternal organization. Maybe you want to show him off before other people for whom he cares nothing. I'm glad you are proud of him; but try for a few years to build the family social life on his interests as well as yours. Get some of his friends—not yours—to invite the two of you out with them. You might be surprised to find how well he responds.

Perhaps I'm guessing wrong, Mrs. R.—but try a campaign along these lines. You might be surprised.

How to Avoid Wintertime 'Headaches'

Gutters, Roofs and Windows Can Be Big Nuisance During Cold Weather

By John Peters

This as the last of three articles suggesting ways of improving the home for winter living.

MOISTURE is one of the toughest problems of buttoning up your house for the winter.

Autumn is the time to check the flashing and mortar around the chimney, the shingles and surfacing on the roof, the caulking around the windows and other vulnerable spots.

Be on the lookout for leaf clogged gutters. They will collect water and freeze in cold weather. A broken gutter or downspout not fitted to the tile drainage system can cause trouble before winter is over.

It makes sense to check over the outside of your house for possible leaks. Unfortunately, the biggest moisture problem in most modern houses is not outside but inside.

In a tightly buttoned up home the trouble is condensation. Warm air holds more moisture than cold air. When it is cooled, it releases moisture in tiny drops of water. The sweat that appears on the cool bathroom mirror when someone takes a hot bath can happen all over the house.

If you buy insulation, be sure it includes a suitable vapor barrier. For moisture that collects inside the walls of your house can be the most troublesome of all. It can cause peeling and blistering of the outside paint, rotting of plaster, discoloring of wallpaper. Generally it is an expensive nuisance.

In the kitchen, bathroom and utility room we create a lot of moist warm air. Ventilation, even in winter, is one of the best ways to take care of it. Small window exhaust fans are better than opening windows. Though some housewives cook everything with enough boiling water to run a steam bath on the side, fans need to operate only when these vapor producing activities are under way.

THE basement has been reclaimed as a room since we learned how to whip the problem of moisture and dampness. Proper ventilation there can be supplemented by chemical or electric dehumidifiers. Bright moisture resistant paints and sturdy asphalt tiles have helped in converting the basement into the most care-free room in the house. It's a natural spot for an up-to-date laundry-sewing room or television and game room.

In finishing off your basement or any of the extra rooms described in yesterday's chapter remember that some of the best furniture can be built-in furniture, planned at the time you are planning the room. Bunks, benches, cabinets are all cheaper to build-in than to buy later as separate pieces of furniture. They save more space and save housework cleaning underneath and around them.

Hard-to-move furniture bought in the latest ready-to-paint furniture, built right into your room.

For standing furniture, such as tables and chairs, consider some of the kit furniture. Everything from authentic New England Colonial reproduction to string chair now comes in knock-down form ready to assemble. Wrought iron legs are now sold in assorted sizes to solve in an easy, good looking way the problem of making your own tables.

Paper patterns are on the market for everything from a bookend of the shelf to an added wing on the house. With a list of materials and numbered directions they are used by more than a million home improvers every year. If you are smart enough with tools to tell a right handed hammer from a left handed monkey-wrench you shouldn't hesitate to try any of these patterns.

ONE OF the ways to keep summer atmosphere all winter long is with house plants. They will bring life to every extra room, from basement to attic.

Keep in mind the conditions under which you expect them to grow. Pick your varieties accordingly. Some of the foliage and flowering plants are not affected by the amount of light.

Others demand a window. The east is the best but on a cold winter night move them away from any window. An ideal temperature is around 70 degrees, but watering will vary depending on the plant, the pot, soil and room.

Lighting is another part of the finishing a room that deserves special winter attention. Long nights and overcast days make good artificial light more important in winter than in summer. Use built-in lights for over-all illumination and lamps for pools of strong light in work areas.

SAFETY at home has as much meaning in your house as at the ball park. More accidents happen in the home than anywhere else—including the nation's highways. There is a direct relation between many home accidents and light.

Proper light will not only help you work better and quicker but more safely. Specific winter "accident areas" to watch are snow-covered walks and stairs.

Fall is the time to buy a good snow shovel. To avoid that morning after the first snowfall feeling, give it a heavy coating of wax or a good rub down with a candle. That will keep snow from sticking to the shovel, make it easier to handle.

One hundred and twenty million dollars worth of power-driven garden tools were bought last year. They have already taken over lawn mowing, hedge trimming, spading and planting. Now snow plowing attachments enable you to use them for this toughest task of winter. The power snow shovel is becoming more popular each year in suburban areas, with long driveways and sidewalks.

Rock salt and calcium chloride can be scattered on walks or driveways to melt the snow and ice but these also kill grass. Much more satisfactory ways are radiant heat snow melters. These range all the way from small electric glass blocks set in the pavement to hot water pipes under the sidewalk.

There are always ways to lick winter problems if you don't wait until winter comes. Get set for winter and winter will be a set-up for you.

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

IT TOOK some pretty aggressive bidding on North's part to reach a slam in the following hand, and South was then faced with a difficult problem of play.

North, dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

North's three-club call on the second round was questionable, despite his good high-card holding, but the contract itself was sound. In fact, it was only West's shrewd choice of opening lead—a trump—that could give declarer any trouble.

South's greatest difficulty was in choosing the best line of play. Perhaps the winning plan might be to take the spade finesse, in an effort to establish that suit. South, however, decided on a different course. He cashed the spade ace, ruffed a spade, then overtook the club queen with the king. Now he hopefully ruffed a second spade, looking for the drop of the king. When this break did not develop, he overtook his trump jack with dummy's king and ruffed still another spade with his last trump, the ace. On this round, West discarded a club.

South led his club four to dummy's jack, and carefully noted the fall of East's nine. Now the diamond 10 drew East's last trump, and West discarded the heart eight. When the spade queen was cashed, West let go the heart jack, and now the situation was crystal-clear to declarer. He exited from dummy with the heart four, and West, in with the ace, had to return a club. South took the marked finesse in dummy and scored up his slam.

It would not have saved West to discard the heart ace—South would simply have cashed the club ace, then led a heart through East.

Wool Lace Blouses

Wool lace blouses are flattering and practical additions to an autumn wardrobe. They look attractive with black velvet skirts as well as with dark wool suits. One blouse with a bateau neckline has a crisp-creased wrap front and is made in the over-blouse style. Another that is extremely tailored has turnover collar and long sleeves finished with French cuffs.

Martha Carr's OPINION—

Dear Martha:

A FAMILY moved in our neighborhood about four weeks ago. This man doesn't seem to work. He's big and well able to work and he's not old. The woman is a little thing. She goes to work every day. We would like to know what's wrong with this guy that he'd live off a little woman like that. Should we go over and see or just naturally go over and take the guy apart without asking any questions? So far as we can see he doesn't even go out too far from home, so he can't be hunting a job.

WORRIED.

I think this must be their problem. It does look as though the wife is being forced to carry far too much of the family responsibility, but there may be some good reason for it that you wouldn't be in a position to know as a casual acquaintance. So my advice is to remain out of it unless after you become better acquainted, the wife asks for your help in working out her problem.

Dear Martha:

CAN YOU CONCEIVE that girls who have had the advantage of a good college education would commit a social faux pas such as two friends of my daughter have done within the last year? My daughter was asked to be in the wedding of these two friends, large church affairs, with several attendants and receptions following. In neither case was I, mother of an attendant, included in either the church ceremony or the reception. Wouldn't you think they would at least realize that I would enjoy seeing my daughter walk down the aisle of the church, even though I might be excluded from the reception? One might hope that some of the culture supposed to be acquired at college would have rubbed off.

DISILLUSIONED MOTHER.

A college degree doesn't bring with it kindness and courtesy and consideration. Those qualities are ingrained in a person and cannot be superimposed from the outside. I agree that you should have been invited to any ceremony in which your daughter participated, especially if the guest lists were large. However, a bride-elect is often guilty of thoughtless actions in the rush of wedding preparations, and it may very well be that neither of these young women had any idea of neglecting you.

Expecting Too Much

By Frances Ilg, M.D., and Louise Ames, Ph.D.
Of the Gesell Institute of Child Development

"I HAVE a 10-year-old daughter," a mother writes, "and I must say she is a problem. I would like to know what I can do to get her to become conscious of her personal habits."

"It seems that I just can't get her to keep her hands and face clean or to keep her clothes neat. And it isn't for the lack of training because I try to make her see the difference between a neat, scrubbed, and clean girl and a soiled, unneat girl of her age."

"Sometimes I think I'm doing this too strong, so I ease off and see if she doesn't do it on her own account but it seems to get worse."

"Why at 5 years old, one couldn't ask for a daughter so neat and mannerly. Could it be that I expect too much from my daughter of 10 years in age? Or is she just going through a stage where she doesn't care?"

"I'm really concerned because she has been in this stage for two years, and it's so exasperating to me at times that I just throw up my hands in disgust."

"She belongs to the Girl Scouts and has nice clothes and a room of her own to put her things away neatly and most everything to work with so I can't understand why with all these things she is so untidy."

YOU HAVE ANSWERED your own question. It is natural that you should wish that your daughter would be neat and clean. But you are expecting too much from a 10-year-old.

As a rule, even girls of 11 don't care very much about their appearance. They may be somewhat interested in having nice clothes, but not in taking care of them. And frequently they are not in the least interested in face, hair and nails, to say nothing of neck.

Usually by 12 an improvement begins. But even 13-year-old girls, many of whom wear lipstick and are quite particular about their hair, are still not very attentive to hands and neck. An appreciation of neatness and cleanliness is acquired slowly.

THE GIRL SCOUTS provide one place or situation which might motivate her. Sometimes a girl of this age will listen to the leader and will do things she is not really ready to do just because the leader suggests it. You might have a talk with her Scout leader.

But on the whole we would advise not saying too much about neatness. Insist on the weekly bath of course, and check on hands and teeth. A weekly clean-up with your help can even be an enjoyable experience. But realize that most 10-year-olds do not have a concept of the need or desirability of cleanliness or neatness. From their point of view it is just something that mother insists on.

If you do not nag too much now, what you say may have more effect later on, and certainly you will live through this with less wear and tear on both you and your daughter.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A GIRL WRITES: "I would like to know how I can decline gracefully to be a wedding attendant for a girl who is comparatively new in this town, but with whom I have become quite friendly. Before she moved here I was engaged to her intended, but unfortunately our wedding plans fell through. This girl is now engaged to him and plans to marry him shortly. She has asked me to be in the wedding party. I never told her of my engagement to him as I did not care to talk about it and furthermore thought this knowledge might embarrass her. So you can see why I'd rather not take part, but how can I bow out without telling her the reason? Can you help me?"

I think you will have to tell her that at one time the groom-to-be was engaged to you and it would surely cause some comment if you were to be in their wedding party.

How did Hitler's mind work? An intimate record of his thoughts has become available in a stenographic record of his private conversations during World War II, usually at dinner in his headquarters and attended only by the Fuehrer's most trusted lieutenants. In this, the third in a series of these talks, condensed from "Hitler's Secret Conversations" (copyright, 1953, by Farrar, Straus, and Young, Inc.), the evil genius tells his own story of how he built the Nazi party and climbed to power.

SINCE the beginning of my political activity, I have made it a rule not to curry favor with the bourgeoisie. The political attitude of that class is marked by the sign of cowardice. It concerns itself exclusively with order and tranquility, and we know in what sense to understand that.

I aimed, instead, to awaken the enthusiasm of the working-class world for my ideas. The first years of my struggle were therefore concentrated on the object: win over the worker to the National-Socialist party. Here's how I set about it:

I followed the example of the Marxists by putting up posters in the most striking red, used propaganda trucks that were literally carpeted with posters of a flaming red, equipped with equally red flags and occupied by thundering loudspeakers.

I saw to it that all the initiatives of the movement came to meetings without stiff collars and without ties, adopting the free-and-easy style so as to get the workers into their confidence.

As for the bourgeois elements who without being real fanatics, wanted to join the ranks of the National-Socialist party, I did everything to put them off—resorting to bawled-out propaganda, disheveled clothes, etc.

My object was to rid myself right from the beginning of the revolutionaries in rabbit's pelt.

I ordered our protective service to treat our opponents roughly and chuck them out of our meetings with so little mildness that the enemy press—which otherwise would have ignored our gatherings—used to make much of the blows and wounds they give rise to, and thus called attention to them.

I sent a few of our own people to take a course in public speaking in the schools organized by the other parties. Thanks to this, we obtained a good insight into the arguments which would be used by those sent to heckle at our meetings, and we were thus in a position to silence them the moment they opened their mouths.

I dealt with the women from the Marxist camp who took part in the discussions by making them look ridiculous.

To convince women by reasoned argument is always impossible; to have had them roughly handled by the ushers of the meeting would have aroused public indignation, and so our best plan was to have recourse to ridicule, and this produced excellent results.

At all my meetings I always spoke extempore. I had, however, a number of party members in the audience with orders to interrupt along lines carefully prepared to give the impression of a spontaneous expression of public opinion, and these interruptions greatly strengthened the force of my own arguments.

If the police intervened, women of our party were given the task of drawing their attention either to opponents or to completely unknown people who happened to find themselves near the entrance to the hall. In cases like this, the police invariably go about their job quite blindly, like a pack of hounds, and we found that this method was most efficacious both for ridding ourselves of undesirable elements of the audience and for getting rid of the police themselves.

I disorganized the meetings of other parties by sending members of our party in the guise of ushers to maintain order, but in reality with instructions to riot and break up the meeting.

By judicious use of all the above methods, I succeeded in winning the support of such large numbers of the better elements of the working classes, that, in the last elections that took place before our assumption of power, we were able to organize no fewer than 180,000 Party meetings.

IT was with Dr. Hans Luther, the then President of the Reichsbank, that I had, in 1933, one of my first discussions on the subject of our rearmament. In view of the deficit in the Reich budget, which then stood at three milliard marks, and of the financial state of the Laender states, which was not much better, it was impossible to make even the smallest effort towards rearmament without the collaboration of the Reichsbank.

In the course of this conversation I impressed upon Dr. Luther that, unless she regained her military power, Germany was doomed to strangulation. Luther listened to me for two hours, at the end of which he assured me of his profoundly nationalist sympathies and promised me all the help he could give me.

He then mentioned a precise figure, telling me that he would put a hundred million marks at my disposal for a moment I thought I must have misunderstood him, for I did not think it possible that a financier should have so little knowledge of the vast expense involved in a policy of rearmament. But when I asked him to repeat what he had said, Luther again gave me the figure of one hundred million.

Further comment was obviously superfluous, so I simply asked the President of the Reich (Paul von Hindenburg) to remove the man from his office. This, however, was not possible without further ado, as the Reichsbank was still an international organization.

I was then compelled to try and reach an amicable agreement. I told Luther that any collaboration between us was impossible, that he might perhaps have some legal means of retaining his position, but that I had now assumed office, that I would brook no argument from him, and that, if the interests of the country demanded it, I should not even hesitate to break him; and then—and this was the idea that Otto Meissner, veteran German diplomat had suggested as a solution—I offered him the post of ambassador to Washington, if he would voluntarily resign his present position.

This he declared himself ready to accept, provided I would add an allowance of 50,000 marks a year to his pension. So I had to pay good money to open the way for the appointment of a man of international reputation to the Presidency of the Reichsbank—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Schacht understood at once that it would be ridiculous to think of launching any rearmament program unless we were prepared to vote many milliards for its implementation.

IN this manner I was able to extract a sum of eight milliards, though the announcement of the figure caused Count von Schwerin-Krosigk, the then Minister of Finance, many grave misgivings.

At this moment General Werner von Blomberg was unfortunately stupid enough to disclose that, apart from these eight milliards, a further supplementary sum of 12 milliards would be required to carry out the preliminary phase of the rearmament program. I reproached Blomberg bitterly for his indiscretion.

After all, seeing that the whole gang of financiers is a bunch of crooks, what possible point was there in being scrupulously honest with them?

It is Schacht who was the instigator of the plan, subsequently put into practice, of devaluing German shares held abroad. Most of these represented reparations held in the form of shares; these shares were then purchased by the open market by intermediaries on our behalf at prices varying from 12 per cent to 18 per cent of their real value, after which German industry was compelled to redeem them at par value. In this way, thanks to a profit of 80 per cent and over, we were able to organize an export dumping campaign which brought in three-quarters of a milliard marks in foreign currency.

It is greatly to Schacht's credit that he remained completely silent on the existence of this foreign currency.

It was only in 1938, when war was obviously inevitable, that I made publicly known the existence of these reserves. It was clear that the future belligerents would, like ourselves, make the most strenuous efforts to buy up any and everything in the way of raw materials that the world's markets had to offer. Speed, therefore, was essential if we wished to avoid seeing our gold and foreign currency reserves transformed suddenly into paper and metal of no value.

It was Walter Funk (later Minister of Economics) that I entrusted the task of buying our share of raw materials. In spite of his ability, I felt I could not quite trust Schacht in this matter, for I had often seen how his face lit up when he succeeded in swindling somebody out of a 100-mark note, and I feared that in the face of such temptation he would quite probably try his freemason's tricks on me!

When I roundly refused to consider any compromise and accept the Vice-Chancellorship in a Franz von Papen Cabinet, and after the vain and treacherous attempts of General Kurt von Schleicher, supported by Gregor Strasser, had failed to split the solid unity of the party, political tension reached its zenith.

'Hitler's Secret Conversations' Dictator's Own Story of His Rise to Power

How He Built Up Nazi Party and Financed Rearmament—Relations With Hindenburg Described ADOLF HITLER RETURNS A SALUTE FROM HIS FOLLOWERS IN MUNICH IN 1930.

Not only did Schleicher fail to win over a log-rolling majority in the Reichstag, but as a result of his go-slow policy as regards national economy, the number of unemployed rose, during the first 15 days of his regime, by no less than a quarter of a million.

In January 1933—one month, that is, after his assumption of office—Schleicher saw no other alternative but to dissolve the Reichstag and form a military cabinet, upheld solely by the support of the President of the Reich.

But the idea of a military dictatorship, in spite of his great personal confidence in General Schleicher, filled old von Hindenburg with the liveliest apprehension. For in his heart of hearts the old gentleman was opposed to soldiers meddling in politics; besides that, he was not prepared to go further in the delegation of political plenipotentiary power than he felt himself able to do in accordance with his constitutional oath.

Faced with this situation of political tension, von Hindenburg, through the intermediary of von Papen, approached me, and in the famous Cologne conversations explored the ground. For myself, I had the impression that all was going well for me. I made it quite clear, therefore, that I would not hear of any compromise, and threw myself, heart and soul, personally into the Lippe electoral campaign.

After the electoral victory at Lippe—a success whose importance it is not possible to overestimate—the advisers of the old gentleman approached me once more. A meeting was arranged at the house of Joachim von Ribbentrop (later German foreign minister) with Hindenburg's son and Herr von Papen. At this meeting I gave an unequivocal description of my reading of the political situation, and declared without mincing words that every week of hesitation was a week irrevocably wasted.

The situation, I said, could be saved only by an amalgamation of all parties, omitting, of course, those fragmentary bourgeois parties which were of no importance and which, in any case, were not join us. Such an amalgamation, I added, could be successfully assured only by myself as Reichs chancellor.

At this juncture I deliberately neglected my work within the party in order to take part in these negotiations, because I considered it of the highest importance that I should legitimately take over the chancellorship with the blessing of the old gentleman. For it was only as constitutionally elected chancellor, obviously, and before undertaking any measures of reconstruction, that I could overcome the opposition of all the other political parties, and avoid finding myself in constant conflict with the Wehrmacht.

My decision to attain power constitutionally was influenced primarily by my knowledge of the attitude of the Wehrmacht vis-a-vis the chancellorship. If I had seized power illegally, the Wehrmacht would have constituted a dangerous breeding place for a coup d'etat in the nature of the Roehm putsch (Ernst Roehm, Nazi leader charged with conspiracy to overthrow Hitler and later executed); by acting constitutionally, on the other hand, I was in a position to restrict the activities of the Wehrmacht to its legal and strictly limited military function—at least until such a time as I was able to introduce conscription.

One that was accomplished, the influx into the Wehrmacht of the masses of the people, together with the spirit of national socialism and with the ever-growing power of the national socialist movement, would, I was sure, allow me to overcome all opposition among the armed forces, and in particular in the corps of officers.

ON Jan. 24, 1933—the day after the SA (Nazi Storm Troops) assault on the Karl-Liebknecht-Haus (Communist headquarters) in Berlin had resulted in a tremendous loss of prestige for the Communist party and caused great indignation in Berlin—I was again invited by von Papen to a conference.

Von Papen told me at once that Schleicher had formally asked the old gentleman for plenipotentiary powers to set up a military dictatorship, but that the latter had refused and had stated that he proposed inviting Adolf Hitler, in the role of leader of a national front, to accept the chancellorship and to form a Government, with the proviso that von Papen should be nominated vice-chancellor.

I replied that I took cognizance of the offer, and, without permitting any discussion of detail, stated the conditions under which I was prepared to accept. These were the immediate dissolution of the Reichstag and the organization of new elections.

ON Jan. 28 the Weimar Republic finally collapsed. Schleicher, or rather the General von Papen (who had been selected as Reichswehr Minister elect) to proceed at once, on arrival in Berlin at 8 a.m. on January 30 direct to the old gentleman to be sworn in, and thus to be in a position, as commander-in-chief of the Reichswehr, to suppress any possible attempts at a coup d'etat.

By 11 o'clock on the morning of January 30, I was able to inform the old gentleman that the new cabinet had been formed, and that the majority in the Reichstag required by constitution to enable it to function had been acquired. Shortly afterwards I received at the hands of the old gentleman my appointment as chancellor of the German Reich.

At the beginning my task as head of this Cabinet was the reverse of simple. With the exception of (Wilhelm) Frick (Minister of Interior), I had initially not one single National-Socialist member of the cabinet.

Within a week or so my relations with Hindenburg began to improve. One day, when he wanted to see me about something or other, I invited him attention to the custom he himself had established—namely, that I could not visit him except in the company of von Papen—and pointed out that the latter was at the moment away from Berlin. The old gentleman replied that he wished to see me alone, and that in future the presence of von Papen could be regarded as unnecessary.

Within three weeks we had progressed so far that his attitude towards me became affectionate and paternal.

When later the first results of the elections began to come in our relations had attained such a degree of frank cordiality, that the old gentleman exclaimed in a voice charged with real satisfaction: "Hitler wins!"

AND when the overwhelming victory of the National Socialists was confirmed, he told me straight out that he had always been averse to the parliamentary game and was delighted that the comedy of elections was now done with, once and for all.

It was by no means easy to convince the old gentleman, but once one had done so, he always gave his fullest support to whatever it might be.

For instance, at first he would not hear of any anti-semitic measures. But when, at a dinner at the Swedish Legation, at which both were present, the King of Sweden expressed certain criticisms of the German policy towards the Jews, the old gentleman refuted them, saying in his deep, sonorous, bass voice that this was a purely domestic German affair, with which the German Chancellor alone was competent to deal.

For the fact that the old gentleman so faithfully followed my lead and always did his utmost to understand my intentions, I am deeply grateful.

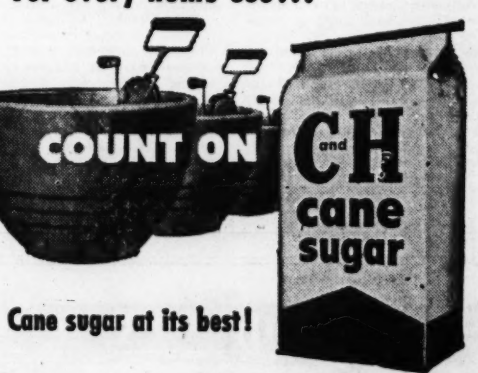

Once I had won him over to my side, the old gentleman's solicitude towards me was truly touching. Again and again he said that he had a chancellor who was sacrificing himself for his country, and that often he could not sleep at night for thinking of "his chancellor flying from one part of the Reich to another in the service of the people." What an eternal shame it was, he added, that such a man must belong to one party.

Woman's Club Opens Season At Fall Tea

THE annual autumn tea given by the St. Louis Woman's Club took place yesterday at the clubhouse with the hospitality committee as the hostess group. The affair opened the fall and winter season for the club which has planned numerous social and cultural events.

Mrs. Donald T. Wright, president; Mrs. Ralph C. Becker, vice president; and Mrs. Thomas H. Cobbs, head of the hospitality committee, were assisted in greeting the members by some of the former presidents and officers of Mrs. Cobbs' committee. They stood before a background of autumn flowers and greenery.

Tea was served in the Colonial dining room by members of the hospitality committee. A pink color theme used throughout the room featured roses, carnations and chrysanthemums on a long tea table. Mrs. Graciela Pampari, harpist; Ernest Walker, violinist; and Lasquale De Cotto, cellist, all members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, provided music for the occasion.

New gold-colored Georgian rose damask drapery at the windows on the stair landing; antique satin swags over nylon mesh glass curtains on the second floor; two William and Mary chairs, presented the club by one of the members, and several pieces of hall furniture newly swagged in coral shades were greatly admired during the afternoon. CHAPTER THREE.
JERI had seen many famous resorts in Europe, but never anything like the Carliotta Inn. Someone had poured millions into this fabulous place. The buildings were Spanish style, and were lined in gay Spanish colors. Elaborate lawn furniture and sun parasols added to the carnival-like appearance. There were two swimming pools, one an immense rectangle with ornate cabanas and the other a simulated ocean beach.

Jeri walked around in a daze. She wondered what Red was paying for her bungalow. In Europe such accommodations would cost a fortune.

When she had left the Golden Dime with Red, feeling the envious eyes of Lola Marlow boring into her back, the play had picked up, and the room was fairly full.

Red took her to his car, a red convertible, and drove her to the station for her bags.

Everyone in Las Flores knew him and called him by his first name. And every male stared at Jeri. She wondered what Red thought about that.

The bungalow proved to be a complete home, with equipped kitchen, living room, two bedrooms and two baths.

Red saw that she got settled, then told her he would call her later in the evening.

"I've got some things to attend to," he explained. "Have dinner served in your bungalow. Sign for everything."

"What about tips?" she asked.

"What is the custom here?"

"The guests tip well," he explained. "You see, the accommodations here are not too expensive. Not more than you'd pay at a second-rate hotel in New York. So they're generous in tipping."

"I don't understand the reasonable rates," Jeri said.

"You will when you see the gambling rooms. That's where they make their dough. It's practically painless to pay for room and board while you're losing your shirt at the tables."

Red grinned broadly.

"I ought to know," he said.

Red gave her his car keys.

"Use the car whenever you want to. Park here by the bungalow. I won't need it tonight."

Then he left.

JERI made a complete tour of the buildings and grounds. The central building contained offices, the dining rooms, three of them, and four large gaming rooms.

All around this building were sleeping rooms, individual and double bungalows.

Synopsis
JERI DANE is the word of RED RANSON, a famous gambler. She is a blonde, a beauty, a girl who has been in the papers for her part in a big case. She is a girl who has been in the papers for her part in a big case. She is a girl who has been in the papers for her part in a big case.

Jeri had her mother's old address. She got in the car and hunted it.

But the street numbers had been changed, and she remembered nothing of the neighborhood.

After inquiring at a drug store she found the place. It was in a run-down neighborhood and the house was now a Chinese laundry.

Jeri sat in the car, weeping quietly. She wished she hadn't looked up the old home.

Jeri dried her eyes and stepped out of the car. She drove back to the Carliotta Inn and unpacked.

Then she put on a bathing suit and went to the big pool. She was expert at swimming and diving, but she heard so many enthusiastic comments on her appearance in a bathing suit, she stayed off the diving boards.

She traveled the length of the pool twice, then pulled up out of the water, and lay on the simulated sandy beach. It was late afternoon, but the sun was still high.

"Miss Dane," she heard a man say.

Turning about she saw Maxie Canoga in bathing trunks.

"I want to apologize," he said in an entirely different tone from the one he used in Red's office earlier in the afternoon. "I'm sorry I couldn't see you in Red's office that I forgot myself."

"Never mind," Jeri said. "I thought nothing of it."

"I hope I am forgiven."

"Certainly."

"Care for a swim?" he asked.

"I just came out. I'm going back to change," she said as abruptly as she could.

"Some other time, perhaps," he said as she walked away.

JERI wondered what had caused the change in the man. She would tell Red about it at the first opportunity.

She went back to the bungalow and dressed, but she was restless and bitterly disappointed that she couldn't have dinner with Red her first evening in Las Flores.

On an impulse, she got into Red's car again and drove out of the town, towards the hills. In a few minutes she was on a mountain grade, climbing up and up.

Jeri kept climbing, until she reached the top of a butte, where there was a picnic ground. She parked the car and got out, walking over to the edge of the cliff. The sun was dropping behind the mountains on the west. On the vast desert floor below her, the colors altered from one brilliant hue to another, as the light changed.

The scene was breath-taking. Jeri wondered why people went to Europe, when there is so much to see in America.

Few cars were on the mountain road now. Except for one or two parties in the picnic area, Jeri seemed to be alone in that great, quiet, vastness of space.

She could see a parking area in the road directly below her. A car nosed around the curve, and stopped there. A girl got out. Jeri was certain it was Lola Marlow.

"I wonder what she's doing," Jeri said aloud.

In a short time another car appeared, and parked directly behind Lola's.

A man clambered out. Unmistakably it was Maxie Canoga. Jeri could see the big bodyguard at the wheel.

"I thought she didn't know Maxie," Jeri said to herself. "She said she had never met a gangster."

The two met. Lola threw her arms about Maxie and kissed him.

Uncle Ray's Column

WHEN WE speak about the ways of salmon, it is well to name the kind of salmon we mean. King salmon, for example, swim far upstream to lay their eggs. Their breeding grounds in branches of the Columbia river are as much as a thousand miles from the mouth of that river.

A female in the king salmon group lays about 8000 eggs. These are placed in shallow water, and the hatches of eggs are anchored in place with pebbles.

YOUNG SALMON hatch from the eggs in eight or nine weeks. By this time the autumn is past, and the little salmon must stay in the headwaters of the river during the winter. The next summer finds them on their way downstream.

The journey to the Pacific may take three or four months, or it may take a year. The young salmon are able to get enough food along the way, and may be from 10 to 12 inches long by the time they enter the ocean.

The ocean life is likely to last at least two years, and may stretch to four years or more. Some salmon spend most, or all, of their time within 25 miles of the coast. Others go out into the ocean for hundreds of miles. They feed on many kinds of small fish, but shrimps seem to be their favorite food.

MANY YOUNG SALMON have been marked before they entered the ocean, and have been caught on their return. Facts about their lives have been gathered in this way. We also are able to tell their age by study of their scales.

In certain salmon groups, the adults weigh only four or five pounds when they return to fresh water. King salmon, however, have an average weight of about 22 pounds at that time. Overgrown salmon, which have stayed in the ocean longer than usual sometimes weigh about 60 to 100 pounds.

Many salmon are captured during their "runs" back into their rivers. Nets are employed to take them in some places, and traps are used as well.
